In presenting the work to the public one finds the following paragraphs in the part at the beginning of the book, known as the Introduction.

"In Gaspe and the counties surrounding the Baie des Chaleurs grew up a brave, hardy race, fearless alike of the toil and dangers of the sea and forest, industrious, hospitable to the core, cherishing the religion and traditions of their fathers. With the passing years a new generation succeeded the old athirst for knowledge." The for a few cents.

SOCIETY AGOG.

Members of high society in New Yorw were shocked the other day when Phyllis Ashbrook, a hostess, and John Manning were lost while climbing a mountain in the Adirondacks. The ouple were driven by a severe storm to seek shelter in an old cabin where they spent the night.

When found the next day, the young eople announced their willingness to Awarded to Miss Margaret Simon of wed, in order that the reputation of the girl involved might not suffer.
