

THE TORONTO WORLD

A DAILY MORNING NEWSPAPER

OFFICE: KING-STREET EAST, TORONTO

W. P. MACLEAN, PUBLISHER

SUBSCRIPTION RATES,

FOR CANADA AND FOREIGN COUNTRIES

No charge for city delivery or postage.

ADVERTISING RATES,

FOR EACH LINE OF ADVERTISING

Ordinary advertisements, fifteen cents per line Advertisement space, one cent a word. Death Announcements, five cents a word. Classified Advertisers who want to keep their names private may do so at extra cost.

SPECIAL RATES FOR POLITICAL OR RELIGIOUS

ADVERTISEMENTS AND FOR PUBLICATIONS

AND FOR PUBLICATIONS

World Telegraph Cable

BOSTON, NEW YORK, LONDON, PARIS, MELBOURNE

The World has the largest circulation of any morning paper in Canada

MONDAY MORNING, AUGUST 13, 1888.

That's offhand, "Facts."

In the following of questions over the ro diums of Sir George Stephen, the Presi dent of the Canadian Pacific Railwa y, he has an expression which deserves at least a passing notice. Our contempor ary begins by characterizing the events referred to as "the most important in the history of Canada." It admits that, as far as the people make their loss, their regret though sensa tional, will be genuine. But it goes on, Sir

George does not raise from the management of the railway. That has long been left to

others, but from the position in which he has arrived, Sir George is compelled to take responsibility. This is "Book 1." The Witness, qui

lly, has no right to say that the people

make their loss, their regret though sensa

tional, will be genuine. But it goes on, Sir

George does not raise from the management

of the railway. That has long been left to

others, but from the position in which he has

arrived, Sir George is compelled to take

responsibility. This is "Book 1." The Witness, qui

lly, has no right to say that the people

make their loss, their regret though sensa

tional, will be genuine. But it goes on, Sir

George does not raise from the management

of the railway. That has long been left to

others, but from the position in which he has

arrived, Sir George is compelled to take

responsibility. This is "Book 1." The Witness, qui

lly, has no right to say that the people

make their loss, their regret though sensa

tional, will be genuine. But it goes on, Sir

George does not raise from the management

of the railway. That has long been left to

others, but from the position in which he has

arrived, Sir George is compelled to take

responsibility. This is "Book 1." The Witness, qui

lly, has no right to say that the people

make their loss, their regret though sensa

tional, will be genuine. But it goes on, Sir

George does not raise from the management

of the railway. That has long been left to

others, but from the position in which he has

arrived, Sir George is compelled to take

responsibility. This is "Book 1." The Witness, qui

lly, has no right to say that the people

make their loss, their regret though sensa

tional, will be genuine. But it goes on, Sir

George does not raise from the management

of the railway. That has long been left to

others, but from the position in which he has

arrived, Sir George is compelled to take

responsibility. This is "Book 1." The Witness, qui

lly, has no right to say that the people

make their loss, their regret though sensa

tional, will be genuine. But it goes on, Sir

George does not raise from the management

of the railway. That has long been left to

others, but from the position in which he has

arrived, Sir George is compelled to take

responsibility. This is "Book 1." The Witness, qui

lly, has no right to say that the people

make their loss, their regret though sensa

tional, will be genuine. But it goes on, Sir

George does not raise from the management

of the railway. That has long been left to

others, but from the position in which he has

arrived, Sir George is compelled to take

responsibility. This is "Book 1." The Witness, qui

lly, has no right to say that the people

make their loss, their regret though sensa

tional, will be genuine. But it goes on, Sir

George does not raise from the management

of the railway. That has long been left to

others, but from the position in which he has

arrived, Sir George is compelled to take

responsibility. This is "Book 1." The Witness, qui

lly, has no right to say that the people

make their loss, their regret though sensa

tional, will be genuine. But it goes on, Sir

George does not raise from the management

of the railway. That has long been left to

others, but from the position in which he has

arrived, Sir George is compelled to take

responsibility. This is "Book 1." The Witness, qui

lly, has no right to say that the people

make their loss, their regret though sensa

tional, will be genuine. But it goes on, Sir

George does not raise from the management

of the railway. That has long been left to

others, but from the position in which he has

arrived, Sir George is compelled to take

responsibility. This is "Book 1." The Witness, qui

lly, has no right to say that the people

make their loss, their regret though sensa

tional, will be genuine. But it goes on, Sir

George does not raise from the management

of the railway. That has long been left to

others, but from the position in which he has

arrived, Sir George is compelled to take

responsibility. This is "Book 1." The Witness, qui

lly, has no right to say that the people

make their loss, their regret though sensa

tional, will be genuine. But it goes on, Sir

George does not raise from the management

of the railway. That has long been left to

others, but from the position in which he has

arrived, Sir George is compelled to take

responsibility. This is "Book 1." The Witness, qui

lly, has no right to say that the people

make their loss, their regret though sensa

tional, will be genuine. But it goes on, Sir

George does not raise from the management

of the railway. That has long been left to

others, but from the position in which he has

arrived, Sir George is compelled to take

responsibility. This is "Book 1." The Witness, qui

lly, has no right to say that the people

make their loss, their regret though sensa

tional, will be genuine. But it goes on, Sir

George does not raise from the management

of the railway. That has long been left to

others, but from the position in which he has

arrived, Sir George is compelled to take

responsibility. This is "Book 1." The Witness, qui

lly, has no right to say that the people

make their loss, their regret though sensa

tional, will be genuine. But it goes on, Sir

George does not raise from the management

of the railway. That has long been left to

others, but from the position in which he has

arrived, Sir George is compelled to take

responsibility. This is "Book 1." The Witness, qui

lly, has no right to say that the people

make their loss, their regret though sensa

tional, will be genuine. But it goes on, Sir

George does not raise from the management

of the railway. That has long been left to

others, but from the position in which he has

arrived, Sir George is compelled to take

responsibility. This is "Book 1." The Witness, qui

lly, has no right to say that the people

make their loss, their regret though sensa

tional, will be genuine. But it goes on, Sir

George does not raise from the management

of the railway. That has long been left to

others, but from the position in which he has

arrived, Sir George is compelled to take

responsibility. This is "Book 1." The Witness, qui

lly, has no right to say that the people

make their loss, their regret though sensa

tional, will be genuine. But it goes on, Sir

George does not raise from the management

of the railway. That has long been left to

others, but from the position in which he has

arrived, Sir George is compelled to take

responsibility. This is "Book 1." The Witness, qui

lly, has no right to say that the people

make their loss, their regret though sensa

tional, will be genuine. But it goes on, Sir

George does not raise from the management

of the railway. That has long been left to

others, but from the position in which he has

arrived, Sir George is compelled to take

responsibility. This is "Book 1." The Witness, qui

lly, has no right to say that the people

make their loss, their regret though sensa

tional, will be genuine. But it goes on, Sir

George does not raise from the management

of the railway. That has long been left to