

FARNELL'S STATEMENT IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THE BARE FORGERIES AND COWARDLY ACTIONS OF THOMPSON SHOWN UP.

LONDON, July 6.—On the assembling of the House of Commons to-day Mr. Farnell rose to make an explanation concerning the statements made in connection with the O'Donnell trial. He said the upshot of the trial was that the evidence was so clear, and so convincing, that he never saw Patrick Egan's letter of February 24, 1881, which was read at the trial with the view of showing that the League was not a conspiracy to murder. He was instigated to do so by a forger. The impostor convinced that it was a forgery. In regard to his letter, dated simply Tuesday, and saying, "I see no objection to your giving the amount asked for. There is not the least likelihood of what you apprehend happening," Mr. Farnell said it might be genuine, but he could not recall it. As to Egan's letter of October 15, 1881, he said that he gave the value of the money, and that he gave it to Egan. He said that he was not a party to the forgery, and that he was not a party to the forgery of the letter which was alleged to be written and which was claimed to be smuggled from Kilmaham jail to Egan, urging him to immediate action and to make it hot for old Forster. He never wrote, signed or authorized the communication. Mr. Farnell then related the fact that he had never signed or authorized the communication. He said that he had never signed or authorized the communication. He said that he had never signed or authorized the communication.

THERE MIGHT BE TWO.

[From the San Francisco Post.]

This one is sick; his wayward face cries out Against the leech, the calomel, the bed. Oh! inconsiderate person, cease to put— You might be dead!

And this one has the mitten; he has woe; Vainly, alas, his woe he wails and wails. Well—even in this there's comfort, rightly viewed— He might be wed!

And here is one who wishes; his all is swept Away in pain, he has had to "fall." He should, I think, be cheerful, that he's kept Safe out of jail.

But late I lost a twenty-dollar bill— And did I bring my hands that I had blundered? Not I, indeed! I'm very thankful still 'Twas not a hundred.

Sooth, should'er e'er capsize when walks are bad, And my good clavicle involve in wreck, Serenely, I should say—How very glad It's not my neck.

Oh! trust me—better not to make do At the few miseries of our common lot. There's millions of 'em—if we only knew!— We haven't got.

O'BRIEN'S CLOTHES.

HOW JOHN FORD, OF TULLAMORE JAIL, SMUGGED THE HISTORIC SUIT TO THE PATRIOT. John Ford, who was recently in Milwaukee, having just arrived from Ireland, tells the following story of how he succeeded in smuggling the suit of clothes to O'Brien while a prisoner in Tullamore Jail. He says: "I was one of the warders at Tullamore Jail, and knowing how to do the work, was also assistant to the prison clerk. Of course I was and am, like a great many others who are not suspected of it, a strong Nationalist, and when Mr. O'Brien was brought to the prison, you may be sure he did not wait for any good turn that I or others could do for him. He wouldn't wear the prison uniform, but insisted on keeping his own clothes. Well, you know in America as well as we do, what happened. One night a sneak thief stole Mr. O'Brien's clothes while he was asleep. One of the uniforms was left for him to put on, but he told him I thought I could get a suit in. I went to the parish priest and explained my plan to him and we telegraphed to Dublin for a suit. I came the next day. I went to the priest's house, took off my own suit and put on the one that was for Mr. O'Brien, then I put on a long ulster over that and went back to the jail, where I waited until I knew the clerk would be busy away from the office. I told the clerk about some letters that were to be written, and, as I expected, he sent me to the office to write them. As soon as I was there I opened the safe with the keys in it. I knew how to open it. There were four keys needed, and I took them. I unlocked one door after another until I got into Mr. O'Brien's cell, where I undressed myself as quickly as I could. He took me by the hands and said, 'God bless you, my boy, you're of the right sort.' Then he put on his own suit and I had nothing on but my underclothes, shirt and waistcoat, and made my way out, carefully locking everything up behind me, put away the keys in their places, got back to the priest's house and got my own clothes, and there was not a soul who knew a thing about it. The next morning there was Mr. O'Brien with a complete suit on, and not a thing to show how they had been brought to him. Well you may believe there was great excitement. Everybody was brought up and questioned and cross-examined, but not a bit of satisfaction could they get, good or bad. Mr. O'Brien was not caught napping again. He slept in the suit after that."

DEATH OF GENERAL SHERIDAN'S MOTHER.

Mrs. Mary Miner Sheridan, mother of Gen. Philip H. Sheridan, whose death was announced last week, was born in County Cavan, Ireland, April 16, 1801, and was married to John Sheridan in that country in 1824. The family moved to Quebec, Can., in 1829, and to Albany, N. Y., in 1830 and thence to Somerset, O. Her husband died in 1875, and on Thursday morning, June 14, her body was placed by the side of her husband. She was a remarkable woman in many respects. She never met trouble in any way, but in the trying times of mental desolation which befall her husband several times while a contractor her energies were only increased to regain what had been lost. Her courage was one of the most remarkable features even up to the time of her death. It never failed her. In the dead hour of night, when anything was wrong and suspicion was aroused of danger from intruders, she invariably would hunt up the cause of the alarm while the household were unconscious of all that was going on about them. An occurrence in 1853 will serve to give an insight into her self-possession and courage. At that time a circus was in Somerset, and her husband, John Sheridan, had about 150 men in his employ on a railroad contract. During the evening a riot between the showmen and the railroad laborers, who numbered over 600, broke out. The fight was a bloody one, which had to be quelled the following day by the militia. On the fatal night word was sent to her on the different contracts to turn out, and from all along the line of the road they came by scores. Mr. Sheridan and the family hurried to the scene, she at once stopped the infuriated men and had them return to their boardinghouses, where they remained until all was quiet. Her charity knew no bounds, and the greatest pleasure of her life outside of her family was in bestowing charity on the needy. Neither acquaintance nor stranger was ever allowed to go unprovided for if she knew it. Her mind was ever on her children and her household duties. She loved to talk of them, and during their visit to her she seemed to forget everything but their happiness. She leaves her three sons, General Sheridan, John L. and Colonel M. V. Sheridan, and a number of grandchildren. May she rest in peace!

A BEAUTIFUL MOUTH.

SOME SUGGESTIONS TO THE LADIES ABOUT THE CARE OF THEIR TEETH AND LIPS. A woman with every other natural charm is not beautiful without a mouth that adds a new suggestiveness to her loveliness. She ceases to be even pretty if, when she speaks, her breath is hot, or if, when she smiles, her teeth are stained. Naturally she still, is absolutely tainted. Naturally she does not know this, and it is only proper that something belonging to her should look after it. It comes from her teeth it is something very quickly remedied. If it comes from her digestion, then it is her doctor's business to get her in good order; but very often in this country of invalid women it

TREAT THE OLD PEOPLE KINDLY.

There is nothing in the world more pathetic than the meek, timorous, shrinking ways of our old people. We have all seen them—when they have given up their own homes to younger hands, and subsided into some out-of-the-way corner of it, to sit by the fireside and table henceforth as if they were pensioners, afraid of making trouble, afraid of being in the way, afraid of accepting the help that is their due, and going down to their graves with a pitiful, deprecating air, as if constantly imploring for something to be done for them. There is no sadder and sharper for the sons and daughters who will accept this attitude on the part of those to whom they owe so much. Sometimes, to be sure, people grow old with bad graces. They become embittered by misfortune or affliction, or are peevish and unreasonably under the goad of ill-health. All the more do they appeal to kindness and sympathy. Let it be borne in mind that we, who are hastening on towards the sunset of life, and that it is possible that we may ripen into a very uncomfortable old people, to demand more of patience and devotion than we as children were.

Three Lottos Cure Catarrh. Mr. Robbins, Ruman P. O. Columbia Co. Pa., says: "My daughter had catarrh when she was five years old, very badly. I saw Dr. Sarg's Catarrh Remedy in a catalogue and procured a bottle for her, and soon saw that it helped her; a third bottle effected a permanent cure. She is now eighteen years old and sound and hearty."

ENGLISH PRESS OPINIONS.

The general tone of the English press is against a policy of silence or of angry denials in the treatment by the Irish party of the revelations in the trial of the O'Donnell. The papers say that will not suffice. There are various reasons must be disproved either through a jury or a parliamentary committee. The Post says if such an investigation is not demanded even the English allies of the Parnellites will share the ugly suspicion that the Irish party are guilty of the charges made against them.

"NUMBER ONE."

The cost incurred by the Times in defending the suit amounts to £12,000. It will try to make O'Donnell liable for the amount. The Parnellites denounce O'Donnell as the course he pursued. The aspect that the Times, known as "Number One," is the person from whom the Times got its information concerning the League. In the lobbies of the House of Commons to-day members of the Irish party denied that Mr. Parnell ever paid Byrne £100. They said the £100 given Byrne was in the shape of a cheque signed by Mr. O'Donnell and represented League subscription.

CLEVER CRIMINALS.

AN ARREST IN TORONTO BREAKS UP THE NOTORIOUS JOHNSON FAMILY. TORONTO, July 6.—Charles Johnson, the notorious counterfeiter, was arrested here yesterday and was sent up to Sarnia to await trial. A month ago he was arrested in Detroit by the United States secret service people, but he broke jail and came to Canada. The prisoner will be extradited if the chain of evidence in this case is not complete. The Johnsons were the cleverest forgers that ever existed in this country. Their organization had distributing branches all over the Dominion and in the United States. Among the crimes with which they are connected are the Racine affair in Montreal, the Small forgery sensation in Toronto and various others in the United States. One of the family, John, is in Kingston penitentiary and the other, who carried the alias of Geo. Howard is in St. Vincent de Paul for burglary at Longue Pointe and during the Montreal carnival, when a safe was taken from a hotel and blown open on the frozen river. The father of the counterfeiter. The only other male member of the family is large and has completed fourteen years in a penitentiary at Albany, N.Y. The mother and sisters are in Toronto, and are said to be connected with the doing of the "hone firm." The arrest is looked upon as leading to the breaking up of a formidable organization of criminals.

GRMS FROM VICTOR HUGO.

Labor is the law; he who rejects it will find equal his torment. Man is not a circle with a single centre; he is an ellipse with a double focus. Facts form one of these, and ideas the other. To read aloud is to insure one's self of what one is reading. There are people who read very loud, and who have the appearance of giving themselves their word of honor as to what they are perusing. To what party did he belong? To the party of humanity.

No mug is small, in fact; any one who is subject to the profound and penetrating influence of nature knows this. All birds that fly have round their leg the head of the infant. The soul aids the body, and at certain moments raises it. It is the only bird which is up in its cage. Poverty in youth, when it succeeds, has this magnificent property about it, that it turns the whole will toward effort, and the whole soul toward aspiration.

There has not been a despot, nor a traitor for nearly a century back, who has not signed, approved, countersigned and copied, no videtur, the partition of Poland. The light which we look attracts us; no one loves the light like the blind man; the deaf always has his eyes fixed on heaven. Why? In order to watch the bird in its flight. If one is not on one's guards, lowered for tenses may lead to baseness of soul.
