"When I was a Boy,"

Writes Postmaster J. C. WOODSON, Forest Hill, W. Va., "I had a bronchial trouble of such a persistent and stubborn character, that the doctor pronounced it incurable with ordinary medicines, and advised me to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I did so, and one bottle cured me. For the last fifteen years, I have used this preparation with good effect whenever I take and I know of numbers of people who keep it in the house all the time, not considering it safe to be without it."

"I have been using Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my family for 30 years, with the most satisfactory results, and can cheerfully recommend it as being especially adapted to all pulmonary complaints. I have, for many years, made pulmonary and other medicines a special study, and I have come to the conclusion that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral occupies a position pre-eminent over other medicines of the class."—Chas. LAST SUMMER VERSUS NEXT SUMMER.

The bleak blinding blizzard is blowing about, and the cold wind is howling in my ears. The overcoat I bought last summer, I need not wear, for it is the essence of wool. The pictures I see are like torturing dreams. When memory frequently strays. Among all the beautiful rose-tinted scenes of last summer's picnicking days. Oh, little I thought, as I purchased ice cream, that the coming of winter would wreck the sweet dream. And did we with only one shirt. But the lesson is lasting. I sadly have learned, and the maid will have winning ways. For whom I blow in every cent I have earned. During next summer's picnicking days.

FAITH, HOPE, AND CHARITY.

In Paris, in 1841, on a cold, foggy Christmas Eve, a street violinist, old and shabby, was making his way along a street. He stopped in front of a cafe and began to play. His strains were so melancholy that virtuosos took to their heels and dogs began to howl. The player in despair sat down on a step, laid his violin across his knees and began to sob. Three young men appeared, singing a merry song then popular among the students of the conservatory, and no perceiving the violinist ran full against him. One nearly knocked him over, and another kicked his hat along the sidewalk. As the old man rose with an air of mingled dignity and humility the young men begged his pardon and restored his hat to him. They asked if they could help him. He said simply:

"Give me alms. I can no longer earn my living by playing, for my fingers have grown stiff. My daughter is dying of consumption and of hunger."
His listeners were deeply touched. They thrust their hands into their pockets, and a total of fifteen cents and a piece of rusks. It was very little. They looked at one another sadly.

"Friends," cried one, "something must be done. This man is our colleague, a brother musician. You, Adolphe, take the old violin and accompany Gustave, while I will take charge of the fairs."
The three men turned up their coat-collars, drew their hair over their foreheads, and pulled down their caps.
"Now, altogether," said the leader, "in honor of the Christ-child in this manger."
"Begin with your prize piece, Adolphe, so as to draw a crowd." Beneath the practised touch of the young virtuoso the violin resounded joyously and the "Carnival of Venice" rang out. Windows were thrown open, people crowded around the player, and silver pieces were dropped into the old man's hat, placed conspicuously under a street lamp. After a minute's pause the violinist played a prelude. Charles, the leader, whispered, "It is your turn, now, Gustave," and the tenor sang "Venus, Gentle Dame," in a strong, clear voice.

The audience increased, and the collection with it. Charmed at the success of his plan, Charles said, "We will finish with the trio, 'William Tell.'" The old musician who had all this time stood motionless, suddenly drew himself up to his full height, seized his stick, and began beating time with such masterly precision that the young singers gathered fresh inspiration and fairly electrified their hearers. Charles was kept busy picking up the coins.

The crowd dispersed slowly when the concert was over, and the old man in a voice that trembled exclaimed, "I tell me your names, that my daughter may remember you in her prayers."
"My name is Faith," said the first artist. "And mine is Hope," said the second. "Then I am Charity," said the third, bringing up the hat, which was overflowing with money. The old man told them he was Chappner, once leader of the orchestra in Strasbourg, where "William Tell" was often given. He blessed the three young students, and wound up his grateful speech with the words, "I predict that you will one day be famous."
"Amen," replied the three friends, and they continued their way gayly down the street.

The tenor's name was Gustave Roger. The violinist was Adolphe Hermaun. The collector was Charles Gouand.

GENERAL NEWS.

The new United States Tariff Bill has just been made public. It places salt iron ore, wood, lumber, and coal on the free list, a real boon to the duty on sugar and certain other articles of necessary use. Very material reductions have been made in the cotton schedule. The bill has yet to pass both Congress and Senate, but it is very likely to become law, with perhaps some modifications. The placing of coal, lumber, and wool on the free list will give fresh impetus to those important Canadian industries.

John Eno, charged with embezzlement of funds of the Second National Bank, New York, of which he was president in 1874, was held for the United States grand jury to-day by Commissioner Shields, under $30,000 bail.

The profits of exhibitors at the World's Fair amount to over ten million dollars, greatly exceeding all previous international expositions. Italy leads, the Italian section taking in $2,500,000 in sales.

Bitter are the fruits of divorce. A man named Smith entered the home of his divorced wife at Kankakee, Ill., the other day, shot her and an elderly widow living with her through the heart, and then sent a bullet through his own brain.

The Vancouver civic authority, with a view of finding work for the large number of unemployed in that city, has ordered the clearance of all city lots from timber at the expense of the owners. It is estimated that in this way work will be found for every unemployed man in the city.

Fully nineteen-twentieths of the coal miners of Glasgow, Scotland, are on strike on account of their employers refusing to raise their pay a shilling a day.

It is proposed to build from New York to Chicago an elevated railway, upon which trains will run at the rate of 100 miles per hour. The total cost is estimated at over a hundred million dollars.

An East Indian exchange has the following: "We learn on excellent authority that the Rev. Richard Somerville Wood, M.A., Oxon, military chaplain of Dum-Dum and Barrackpore, has intimated to his Bishop the resignation of his appointment, with view to his entering the Catholic Church. Mr. Wood was appointed a military chaplain on the Church of England Indian Establishment last year, and Mrs. Wood, his wife, was received into the Church by one of the Jesuit Fathers in Calcutta a few weeks ago."

MONSIGNOR SATOLLI ON CATHOLIC EDUCATION.

At a reception given on Thursday last, by the Faculty and students of Gonzaga College, Washington, Mgr. Satolli made an important declaration on the question of separate schools. His remarks were a eulogy upon Catholic schools, which, in view of the recently expressed purpose by the Catholic authorities in Baltimore to ask State aid for the schools of the Church, may be regarded as significant. The delegate spoke in Latin, and the following summary of his remarks was furnished by Dr. Papi, his secretary. After a graceful reference to the duty of Catholics to observe Thanksgiving day, and to pray for the prosperity of the republic, Mgr. Satolli said: "We may be sure of this, that all the Americans, of whatever church they may be members, even if of none, recognize the value of the Catholic school. They are interested in it; they are for it; they wish it to continue and progress. They have learned by experience that citizens educated in these schools do not fall short in knowledge and love of the American constitution; that they do not lag behind the most progressive of the American people; that they are endowed with steadfastness of character, with consistency of right purposes; that they are just, active, charitable, and generous unto sacrifice. Such then is the magnificent spectacle presented in America by the Catholic school, not unlike the spectacle given by the first Christians to the whole world in the early centuries of the Church, but thanks to God and glory to the men who inspired the American constitution, such a state of things as obtained in Rome is not possible here, and I will say that whoever meditates on the principles of the American constitution, whoever is acquainted with the present conditions of the American republic, should be persuaded and agree with us that the action of the Catholic faith and morality is favorable in every way to the direction in which the constitution turns. For the more the public opinion and the government will favor the Catholic schools, more and more will the welfare of the commonwealth be advanced. The Catholic education is the surest safeguard of the permanence throughout the centuries of the constitution and the best guide of the republic in civil progress. From this source the constitution will gather on that assimilation so necessary for the perfect organization of that great progressive body which is the American republic. That is the sincere expression of conviction, and so to speak, the profession of my faith in the matter. Up to the present it has been inexplicable to me, and never perhaps shall I find out what was the origin of the suspicion that my views were not favorable to Catholic schools. Those who at first or ever after have attributed to me such an assured opinion ought to point to some word or action of mine to justify themselves. Had I spoken differently I should be unfaithful to my mission, ungrateful to the generous hospitality which I have encountered and am enjoying in America, and, moreover, I should have given the lie to my first and unchangeable convictions. Every Catholic school is a safe guardian of youth, and it is at the same time for the American youth a place of training, where they are brought up for the advantage of Church and country. Grant heaven, that the Catholic schools may continue to increase in number, grow stronger, reach the highest perfection, endowed with the blessing of God, commended by the authority of the Church and the Holy Father, honored and appreciated by every honest citizen from the illustrious president down to the most humble workman. Those only are against them who do not know them or who are not animated by the spirit of the Church, and are wanting in the sentiments of true liberty."

Death of Hon. John Boyd.

Hon. John Boyd, lieutenant-governor of New Brunswick, died shortly after midnight Sunday last of apoplexy. He was at church the same evening in apparent good health.

The deceased gentleman was born at Maugherafelt county, Derry, Ireland, on September 23, 1826. He received his education at the grammar school, St. John, N. B. In 1838 he entered the wholesale warehouse of Messrs. Holdsworth and Daniel, and in 1853 became a partner in the firm, under the style of Messrs. Daniel & Boyd. He was a director of the Sun Life Insurance company and was identified with almost every progressive movement in St. John, whether municipal, political or social, for many years past, and was always a warm advocate for the establishment and extension of railway communication. He took a prominent part in the agitation in favor of Confederation from the time of its inception, when it was very unpopular, until its triumph, and on public platforms in various parts of New Brunswick energetically advocated an independent principle of the union. He was also long identified with provincial educational movements. Mr. Boyd, as a Liberal-Conservative, was elected to the Senate on February 11, 1879.
