

has served the interests of both Canada and the United States well.

4. Throughout consideration of the Canadian response to the Garrison Diversion project, there has been the closest possible consultation and agreement between the government of Manitoba and the federal government. Following receipt of the letter of January 10, 1973 from the Hon. Sidney Green, federal officials were actively engaged in consultation with the government of Manitoba and in informal exchanges with United States officials to establish the most comprehensive possible assessment of the project's implications for Canada and then to elaborating the most effective means of documenting and registering Canadian concerns to the United States government. This led to the submission of a formal diplomatic Note to the United States government on October 23, 1973 setting out the anticipated instances of injury to Canadian health and property in detail. During the informal exchanges with United States officials prior to the note, the latter were made fully aware of our view that the project as conceived would injure health and property in Canada.
