

God and nature have armed them for their defence, and stand by us still. But if the English nobility no longer will avow altho' venial Swedes, altho' unhappy Saxons revenge upon Brandenburgers, the miseries of an invasion rendered necessary by the weak perfidy of their own Prince; yet the protestant cause must be defended. Altho' protestant Palatines, Bohemians, and Hunga- rians come armed under the standards of their tyrants, the universal fate of an inslaved people; altho' driven and compelled Wurtemburgers aim their weapons at the breasts of their brethren, to avoid the death that awaits them behind; p. 22. yet the veil must be saved, even with the destruction of our captived friends, tugging at a Pirate's ear.

B E I N G S