THE TORONTO WORLD ONE CENT MORNING PAPER

No. 25 YONGE STREET, Toronto.

A CONSTITUTION TINKER.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier has announced his latest policy that of Senate Reform. We gather from his speech at Montreal on Tuesday night that he and his Government will propose to Parliament that in cases where the Senate cannot agree with the House of Commons the two chambers shall unite and the majority of the united chamber shall be the voice of Parliament. [Why not go a step further and include the Governor-General when he proposes to exercise his veto? Put the three estates into one and the majority will rule. That is the logical ending of Sir Wilfrid's proposal.] Mr. Edward Blake was asked twenty-five years ago why he did not take more interest in the fiscal policy of Canada. He replied that he was giving his attention to the constitution rather than to legislation that affected the pockets of the people. That was his greatest mistake, and it is too often the mistake of lawyers who are in politics. Any constitution almost is good enough; people can live under it; but a fiscal policy, the question of railways, of trade and manufactures, of how to promote agriculture, these are all vital issues to the people, and it is to the advancement of such subjects that the people expect our legislators to devote themselves. They do not worry much about the constitution—there is no bread and butter in it. Well, Sir Wilfrid, following Mr. Blake's unprofitable example, is going in for constitution-mongering. He will find it a poor, fat and worthless occupation. The Manitoba school question was one of these unprofitable "constitutional issues" and it kept Canada back for five years. But the lawyer-politician reveals in them. Canada for the next ten years will be satisfied with business legislation and the existing constitution. Sir Wilfrid, if he is in earnest, is embarking on, in plunging the country into, an unnecessary struggle that may drag on for ten years. It will distract the attention of the people from business; it will breed discontent and set provinces against provinces; it will bring on unnecessary elections and will ruin the party bound up with it. Sir Wilfrid's proposal is founded on grave errors and profound ignorance. We propose to mention two of these errors. Sir Wilfrid's prime error is in pretending to believe that the Senate is an inferior branch of Parliament. It is not. It is on a perfect equality with the House of Commons and the Governor-General. They are all free, independent one of the other, and co-equal. There is no inferior member of this blessed Trinity—they are three and not one. Sir Wilfrid would make them one. If churchmen will pardon us we will quote three verses from the Creed of Saint Athanasius: And in the Trinity none is afore, or less than another; But the whole three Persons are co-eternal together; and co-equal. He therefore that will be saved; must thus think of the Trinity. Sir Wilfrid Laurier is making the mistake of his life in trying to assign an inferior position to the Senate. Whoever made the Parliament made them equal, independent one of the other, and made them so for a purpose. The House of Lords is a great fact of the English constitution, and so is the Senate of the Canadian constitution. As the British North America Act puts it: It shall be the duty of the Senate and the House of Commons, to advise and consent to the bills that shall be presented to them. And every Act of Parliament has this in the first clause: Her Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate and House of Commons, enacts as follows: The Senate has the senior position here and everywhere else. Sir Wilfrid Laurier must therefore admit the equality of the Senate with the House of Commons. But he says it is irresponsible that it is "independent of the people and uncontrolled by the public opinion of the country." [Dominion Labour Convention, Ottawa, 1893.] And this brings us to Sir Wilfrid's other capital error, viz., that the House of Commons alone reflects "the public opinion of the country." Never was a greater fallacy in regard to the constitution. The House of Commons, the popular chamber, often misrepresents public opinion better than the other house. Our Canadian Senate, as a matter of fact, often represents public opinion better than the House of Commons, and in the two particular cases of which Sir Wilfrid complains, the Yukon deal and the Drummond County deal, the Senate was right and was in harmony with public opinion, while the Commons was not. This error or pretence that the House of Commons is the voice of the people on all occasions will land Sir Wilfrid in many a snag before he is much older. It is public opinion that governs ultimately in this country, and public opinion speaks sometimes through the lower house, sometimes through the upper house, sometimes through the Queen. Sir Wilfrid doesn't seem to have yet learned this fact. But this is as far as we can go this morning. The subject is a lively one and a long one, and we take leave of it for the present with this observation: that a Senate reformed as Sir Wilfrid proposes to reform it would be in every way a worthless chamber.

THE OTHER SIDE OF THE SHIELD.

Having obtained their option of the Philippines the Americans are by no means unanimous about taking it up as they were when the glory of Imperialism first hypnotized them. The second sober sense of the nation is beginning to assert itself, and it is by no means an absolute certainty that the islands will be annexed. The treaty of peace has yet to be ratified by the Senate, which will discuss the document immediately after Congress reconvenes next month. Even if the treaty is ratified it is contended that its ratification imposes no obligation on the United States to retain the islands or incorporate them as part of the United States. It is said not a few of the Senators will vote for ratification on this understanding. In the meantime the expansionists are having the other side of the case vigorously presented to them through the daily press and magazines. Two articles opposing annexation appear in the January number of The North American Review. One is by Mr. Andrew Carnegie, whose hard common sense arraignment of the policy of annexation ought to exert no little influence in defeating it. Some of the statements made by Mr. Carnegie will not be relished by that large portion of the American people who glibly talk about the United States being the most powerful nation in the world. He candidly admits that it was by Britain's neutrality, and by that alone, that the United States were permitted to take the Philippines. Comparing the relative strength of the navies of the great powers he concludes that it would take the U. S. twenty years to build a fleet equal to that of Great Britain, building at the rate of twenty war ships a year. And he contends that they will have to have a fleet equal to the best of any of the powers if they enter on a career of Imperialism. A comparison of the armies is equally unfavorable to the U. S. as that of the navies. Germany's army, for instance, numbers 562,352 men on a peace footing, and 3,000,000 on a war footing. The present force of the U. S. army is 62,000 by law, but as a matter of fact they have only 56,000 men. Mr. Carnegie thinks there is very great reason to doubt that the army could be raised to 100,000 without a great advance in pay and perhaps not without conscription. In a word, the U. S. cannot stand alone at the present juncture and it will be twenty years before she will have a fleet sufficient for the emergencies that will arise. To quote the author: "To rush in now without army or navy, trusting to the treacherous shifting foundation of anybody's protection or neutrality or alliance, is to court defeat and such humiliation as has rarely fallen to the lot of any nation, even to the poorest and most feeble of the world." The U. S. must become the "cat-in-the-hat" of the former ventures into the arena. Mr. Carnegie concludes his article by recommending the independence of the Philippines. Another writer on the same subject is Senator G. V. Vest. According to him nothing but foreign complications, ruinous expenditure, social and political deterioration and the destruction of free institutions can come from annexation. He draws a poor picture of the possibilities of trade expansion in the islands. The natives are indolent in the extreme. They follow no regular work, cannot be depended upon and have no loyalty. Three million out of the ten million are described as savages. The islands are so far away and the climatic and other conditions are so adverse that it is absurd to think of American laborers making their homes there. As far as the U. S. is concerned even if the U. S. got the whole of it the profit would be insignificant. But there are others in the field, including England, Germany and Spain, with whom the trade will have to be shared. TO CONQUER CONSUMPTION. Of late years the attention of philanthropists and the medical profession has been drawn to the ravages of consumption. This scourge is not confined to the old lands, it is spreading rapidly over the globe. It is completed that at least 200 persons die daily of this disease in Canada and Ireland every day. This is a startling statement, and it is the realization of this fact that has led to the formation of the National Association for the Prevention of Consumption and Other Forms of Tuberculosis. The association is organized, and of the means by which its spread may be prevented, and thus to strengthen the hands of medical men struggling with the country who are dealing with individual cases of this disease; (2) to extinguish tuberculosis in cattle; (3) to promote the erection of sanitariums for the open-air treatment of tuberculous diseases. Eminent practical are the suggestions of this new association. The first is to restrict the sale of meat from tuberculous animals found to be affected, and it will urge upon district and county councils and all rural and urban authorities the supervision of cattle sheds and of dairy farms and of all the agencies for the distribution of milk. All these suggestions were endorsed by the Prince of Wales, Lord Salisbury, Lord Rosebery and distinguished medical men. One point of special interest in Canada is the success which has attended various places attended the open-air treatment of phthisis. The chance of recovery, once the privilege of the rich, is now being made available to the masses of the community. The association will advocate the erection of sanitariums for the benefit of the poor in Great Britain. The result will be looked for with great interest, and this national association may be expected to infuse fresh energy into the operations of those who are so philanthropically fighting this white scourge in the Dominion. CANADA ON THE BRINK. The World's recent articles calling attention to the dangers of an Anglo-American alliance, as far as Canadian independence is concerned have caused widespread comment in the American press. The three letters about the subject, received from American citizens, they speak for themselves. As far as the Dominion is concerned we have received scores of them, but cannot at present find room for them. Annexation Better for Both. Editor World: I note with interest the annexation article in your issue of yesterday. But for the life of me I cannot understand what hardship would come to

Where the Yanks Are Weak.

Editor World: There is a notice in a paper here of some sort of fear among Canadians that the United States is about to absorb Canada. If you will read over the enclosed data, it may have some effect in showing people in Canada that the United States is a far more vulnerable country than is suspected of being, even by its own citizens. The United States keep up the volunteer spirit they seem to have, they are not so well off as they are supposed to be. They are full of small caliber rapid-fire field guns, 50 and 75 calibre, and they are not so expensive, do not take many horses or expensive ammunition, and if they will see to it that they are kept in shape, the United States will be careful never to trouble them. There is no volunteer force in the United States, and if there were it will be as the people do not seem to understand it as it exists in Great Britain. There is no volunteer military whatever worth calling by that name. With say, 20,000 volunteer artillery in Canada, well trained in range shooting with their non-commissioned officers in training, in slinging and firing cannon, and a few more who know how to handle a rifle, they would be a force to be reckoned with.
