WALKING AS AN EXERCISE

When the average man reaches the age of 50 he just about becomes an expert in the line of polishing chair seats, and very few look upon the task of Edward Payson Weston, the aged pedestrian, except to remark that the old man is a crank and probably does not get realize what he is doing.

But when he is now 70 years of age, and he has crossed the continent in the interest of his health, it is a different matter. He is hale and hearty, while other men of his age would be considered as old and decrepit. He is hale and hearty, while other men of his age would be considered as old and decrepit.
