BIG TWO REASON FURNITURE SALE

WHAT DOES IT MEAN ?

This Great Two Reason Furniture Sale means that you will now be able to procure all kinds of House Furniture from Kitchen to Drawing Room, suitable for Christmas Gifts, at a tremendous saving—a saving of one-third to half the regular prices, which you will admit is a great saving to the purchaser when it is made from an honest and fair regular price.

Reason No. 2—Stock taking will soon be at hand and also as we have been advised of big shipments of new furniture to arrive any day at our store which would be impossible for us to find available floor space owing to our present large stock on hand, we find it necessary to offer the public our entire stock at a remarkable reduction of 1-3 to 1-2 the regular prices. The prudent buyer will read this ad. and call at once—the profit to us is in disposing of goods that, while new now, would be old if we had to store them away to make room for other goods. We have made up our minds to shrivel the prices on every piece of furniture in the store—so come get your share of the good things.

HEART DISEASE CURED

Kingston Girl Saved By
"Fruit-a-tives"

Heart Weakness and Heart Irritation are the common outgrowth of Indigestion. Gas is formed in the stomach and this accumulation of gas bulges out the walls of the stomach and presses against the heart. Palpitation, pain over the heart, and sometimes a feeling of smothering and dizziness, all are caused by the stomach and not because of any organic heart disease.

"Fruit-a-tives" will always cure this weak, irritated condition of the heart by curing the stomach.

"I suffered for some years with a dangerous form of Heart Trouble. My heart beat violently, and I had pain over the heart and chest. I also suffered from Constipation and Indigestion. I was treated by physicians and took many medicines, but did not get any good. Then I began taking "Fruit-a-tives," and this medicine completely cured me of all the heart trouble, constipation and indigestion and gave me back perfect health."

La MARQUISE
de FONTENOY
Freedom of City of London to Earl Grey—The 200
lb Pie at Howick Hall—
Lord Kitchener's Great
Sway

(Copyright, 1911, by the Brentwood Company.)

Earl Grey is about to receive the freedom of the City of London in recognition of his services as Governor-General of Canada, just in the same way that it was bestowed upon Lord Cromer on his final return from Egypt and upon Lord Curzon on the termination of his viceroyalty of India. The four other survivors of the nine governor-generals who have held office in Ottawa since the confederation of Canada into a dominion in 1867, will be present—the Duke of Argyll, who as Marquis of Lorne, was governor-general in 1878; the Marquis of Lansdowne, who was governor-general in 1883; the Earl of Aberdeen, in 1888; and the Earl of Minto in 1898. Lord Monck, who was governor-general in 1867; Lord Lisgar, who followed him in 1868; the late Marquis of Dufferin, who was governor in the early seventies; and the late Earl of Derby, who figured in Ottawa as Lord Stanley of Preston, have all since been gathered to their fathers.

Lord and Lady Grey are now established at Howick Hall, their country seat in Northumberland; and they hold office which has been in the possession of the Northumberland Greys since Sir Edward Blyth, who was created Viscount Grey of James I. It may be added that he was even in those days regarded by his contemporaries as one of the most ancient houses of England's northernmost shire.

Howick Hall stands in the midst of a beautiful garden and of an extensive park stretching to the sea. It is about forty miles from Newcastle, the nearest town. The earl has found one family treasure missing from Howick Hall since he returned from Canada, namely, the portrait of Benjamin Franklin, which the ill-fated Major Andre, while serving on the staff of the first Lord Grey, had taken to the island of St. John's, N. B. The portrait, which hung in Howick Hall for considerably more than 100 years, Lord Grey, during his term of office as Governor-General of Canada presented to the United States Government, on the occasion of one of his visits to Washington, announcing the gift at a banquet given in his honor by the Society of Loyalists in New York, and at which Senator Root, then secretary of state in the Roosevelt administration, was present.

Nowadays, peace reigns at Howick Hall. But this was not the case when it belonged to Lord Grey's uncle and immediate predecessor, a very old character. He had no children, but his seven brothers and his five sisters, with their numerous children, were always welcome at Howick Hall, which was invariably chock-full of guests, every one of whom was either a brother or sister, or nephew, or niece, sometimes even a grand-nephew or grand-niece, of the old host. Somehow, with the exception of "Betty" Grey, the present earl, they had all inherited the disputatious and quarrelsome disposition for which the Greys of Howick have always been celebrated; so that the scenes at table used to be exceedingly lively.

Suffered With Nerve Trouble For Two Years.

IT WAS IMPOSSIBLE FOR HIM TO SLEEP.

Diseases of the nervous system are very common. All the organs of the body may be sound while the nervous system alone may be diseased, therefore it is necessary for anyone suffering from any nervous trouble to procure a remedy which will at once quieten the nerves and build up the system.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will do this for you, preparing you give them a fair trial.
Mr. Chas. W. Woods, Montreal, Que., writes:—"For two years I had suffered with nerve trouble, and it was impossible for me to sleep. It did not matter how long I went to bed, in the morning I was even worse than the night before. I consulted a doctor, and he gave me a tonic to take a half hour before going to bed. It was all right for a time, but the old trouble returned with greater force than before. One of the boys, who works with me, gave me half a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I took them and I got such satisfaction that I got another box, and before I finished it I could enjoy sleep from 10 p.m. until 6 a.m., and now feel good."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By BUTH CAMERON

WHEN the Pilgrims instituted Thanksgiving Day they meant that on that day special thanks should be given to God.

Everyone knows that, and presumably everyone with intelligence enough to regard the day as something besides an opportunity for overeating, does that.

May I suggest an additional observance?

Don't you think it would be a grand idea to make today your Thanksgiving Day to your fellow men, as well as to the Almighty—that is, to give thanks to those you love for some of the innumerable kindnesses they do you, and which for the most part of the year you are sadly apt to accept as a matter of course?

For instance—there's father. On three hundred and sixty-four days of the year you probably take his daily self-denial of all the luxuries he might have had, for the sake of bringing you up, as a matter of course—a sort of debt he owes you for bringing you into the world. Suppose today you go to him and give him thanks and tell him you do appreciate that it means sacrifice to him to smoke a pipe instead of the cigars he used to be so fond of, to dine at cheap restaurants and wear shabby clothes and to give up that club to which he was once so proud of belonging.

Then there's mother. Perhaps on three hundred and sixty-four days of the year you take most of her little day-by-day services as a matter of course. You are so used to having her sew in the rucing, press the ties, mend the trousers or press out the gown for the party, that you have things as just part of her duties as a mother. Suppose today you surprise her by going to her and giving her thanks for all these dear services. Mention them one by one and tell her how splendidly she performs them and reassure her of that truth which you surely must have told her many times before—that she is the very best mother that ever happened to an underserving son or daughter.

Suppose you have a bad temper—you know it, and try to control it, but don't always succeed. And suppose your little wife for the most part bears very patiently with your outbursts. Ordinarily, you have taken her forbearance as a matter of course. Would it not be well today to go to her and thank her for that forbearance?

Suppose you have a very faithful employe. Ordinarily, you accept his service as something you have paid for and should have. In the bottom of your heart you know you can't wholly pay in money for such splendid service. Suppose you sit down today and write him a few words, telling him so and thanking him for his faithfulness. And then—but enough. You know yourself what are the kindnesses, the blessings, the services that you take as a matter of course on all the matter of course days of the year.

Could God be better thanked or Thanksgiving Day better observed than by your giving thanks to your neighbors for some of these?

Lady Grey will have to face, now that they are committed to spending Christmas at Howick Hall, after so many years of absence. It is an infliction in the form of the celebrated Howick Christmas pie, of which both are expected to partake liberally.

The pie which weights some 200 pounds, is nine feet in circumference, and so huge that it is fitted neatly into a wooden case on four wheels, so that it can be wheeled round the table. An idea of the richness of the pie may be gathered from a list of some of the ingredients. According to the recipe, which dates back to the middle of the eighteenth century, the pie is made up of several bushels of flour, twenty pounds of butter; four geese; two rabbits; six wild ducks; six woodcock; a dozen snipe; three brace of partridges; two nests' tongues; seven black birds; six pigeons; and six pheasants, the latter, it is said in the recipe, "by way of flavor."

Recalls Port Arthur
Vice Admiral Prince Alexander Lieven, who has just been appointed chief of the general staff of the Russian navy, is the officer who, commanding the cruiser Diana at the outbreak of the war between Russia and Japan in 1904, took part in that gallant dash out of Port Arthur by the Russian warships in harbor in defiance of preposterous instructions received from St. Petersburg.

It will be recalled that the Russian ships were either driven back into port, damaged almost beyond repair, or else sunk, by Admiral Togo. Only one of them got away, namely, the Diana, owing to the superior seamanship of her captain, Prince Alexander Lieven.

Fighting off an escaping Japanese cruiser sent in pursuit, Lieven managed to navigate her in safety to the French port of Saigon, thousands of miles away, where she was dismantled in accordance with the requirements of the laws of neutrality to be held until the end of the war.

While at Saigon, Lieven was joined by his wife, who had made her escape from Port Arthur through the tightly drawn Japanese lines of the besieging forces, by disguising herself as a Chinaman, and under the cover of a binding snowstorm.

In fact, her extraordinary adventures, and the romantic features of her escape, appealed so powerfully to the great people of St. Petersburg, that they have since then forgiven her husband for marrying her. Their former objections to her were due to the fact that she was a divorcee and a woman of birth far inferior to his own.

Alexander Lieven can trace his ancestry in an unbroken line to Henry Lieve, who was a feudal baron, vassal to the Archbishop of Riga, in the thirteenth century. The Lievens owe their title of prince, and their prefix of "serene highness"—enjoyed by so very few of the princely houses of Russia—to the fact that the widow of General Count Otto Lieven was governess of the children of Czar Paul and that Emperor Alexander I. and Nicholas I., as well as the Czarovitch Constantine, who waived his rights of succession to the throne in favor of his younger brother, all three regarded her as their second mother.

Kitchener's Great Sway
Although the representative of Sir Edward Grey, the Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, was careful to explain at the time of Lord Kitchener's appointment to the position of minister plenipotentiary in Egypt last summer that his duties there would be identical with those of his predecessors, that is to say, purely diplomatic and civil, yet it is apparent, from the general order just issued by the war department in London, that Lord Kitchener will, as field marshal, have, de facto, supreme command of all the military forces not only in Egypt and in the Sudan, but also in the military district of the Mediterranean, comprising Malta, Gibraltar, and Cyprus.

In the first place, it is ordered that the governor-general of the Soudan, the Egyptian army, and the English general officer commanding the British army of occupation in Egypt are to be directly responsible to Lord Kitchener. Moreover, General Sir Ian Hamilton, who is not only the commander-in-chief of the forces beyond the sea, but also the commander-in-chief of the British forces in Cairo, all his views on strategy and defence and all the measures that he proposes to take before communicating them to the war department in London.

There are several other paragraphs in the new general order on the same lines, all tending to make it quite clear that, though nominally Lord Kitchener is merely British Minister Plenipotentiary in Egypt, he is in reality in supreme command of all the military forces in Egypt and in England's various strongholds in the Mediterranean.
