COAL COMPANY HOUSES POPULATION OF 13,200

Some Interesting Facts From Census Taken at the Cape Breton Mines

(Gloucester Gazette)

The Dominion Coal Company have recently completed a census of their houses at the mines from which, by the courtesy of the management, a Gazette representative has been enabled to glean some interesting particulars.

The number of single dwellings totals 2,300, in addition to which the company owns a large number of boarding houses, hotels, and living shacks.

The families of the householders are fairly evenly divided into boys and girls, but the balance lies with the boys, who number 3,354 compared with 3,054 girls.

NOBILITY IN ROMANCE

Rameses II, King of Egypt, Figures in Love Venture With Shepherd as Rival

A pretty story of love and adventure in the far distant boundaries of old Egypt will be shown next week at the Gem Theatre, in which several historic characters figure prominently, and which the ancient customs of the Egyptians will be reproduced in all their simplicity or elegance, according to the ran of the characters. It is a double reel production entitled "Rameses, King of Egypt," and deals with his love for a native, who is pledged to Efram, a shepherd lad, while the king intrigues a schemes to win her. The picture is scored a notable success elsewhere.
