A FRIENDLESS FUNERAL.

Hearses Alone Composed the Attend ance at the Hougaard Obsequies.

Chicago, Jan. 17.—Hearse alone composed the funeral which conveyed to the netery the remains of the Hougaard family, who were asphyxiated by gas Sunday night. It now appears that Hougaard or Hansen was more unfortunate that criminal. Danish Consul Peterson says the stories of Hansen's extensive robberies were falsehoods. Hansen was a man of education and good birth. He ran a commission house at Nickjogpin, Denmark, and was regarded as one of the most prosperous men of the territory. But he got behind in his accounts, lost his head, and instead of trying to settle with his creditors ran away to America with his wife and family. Here his attorneys, whom he trusted, appear to have fleeced him out of what little money he had left after a couple of unlucky business ventures in Chicago.

He had previously had a quarrel with some of them, and while the crowd was talking and drinking he was seen to go quietly out. Nothing was thought of it until a noise was heard outside. Charles Lagar, with whom he had quarrelled, walked to the window, and Visalvas appeared before him, discharging a revolver at him. The bullet grazed his forhead and then pierced the head of Frank Vilagea, who was sitting with his back to the window. He fell dead. The men in the saloon ran after the murderer. He turned and dared them to come out. They closed in on him. He fired four shots without effect, and then he was seized and placed under arrest before he could resist. > A Parson Who Thinks That the Great Athiest Would Have Made a Good Preacher.

Chicago, Jan. 17.-Thousands of prayers were said for Col. R. G. Ingersoll a little while ago. Dr. John Rusk, of the Militant church, wishes to know how efficacious these prayers have been. To bring the question to actual test, the clergyman has forwarded the following letter to the author of "The Mistakes of Moses:"

of "The Mistakes of Moses:"

"The Militant church which is organized for the purpose of bettering the condition of mankind, regardless of creed or lack of it, desires to extend to you an invitation to preach for us some Sunday morning in the near future on the subject of your views as to what the Christian church should do and how. The motto of our Men's club is: 'Act in this World, Theorize in the Next.' Some of our most earnest workers hold your views, while others are devout Christians. All work together, however, think for themselves, and no criticism as to creed is exhanged. We have a volunteer orchestra of twenty-five pieces, a legal commission, composed of over thirty of the leading lawyers of Chicago, who are each pledged to try one case a week free of charge for the poor, or to take up the prosecution of lax city officials or law breakers.

"Our committee of physicians bunt up the ers.

"Our committee of physicians hunt up the poor and care for the sick, delegates visit the police station and cure drunkards by practical methods. The health committee of ladies fights the saloon by trying to provide for the working man a better club house, not by invectives.

"Knowing your interest in honest, practical work for humanity, and feeling that the fact that I am a Christian and you are not, should not prevent us from working together for the uplifting of humanity and leaving it to the individual helped to judge for himself what is true, I earnestly invite you to give us the assistance of your ability for one Sunday in building up a movement great enough to embrace and love all humanity, from the highest to the lowest."

Since Mr. Rusk made his invitation, many think it is the first stage in the fulfillment of thousands of prayers that Ingersoll might be turned to the vocation of the church. Speaking of the matter, Dr. Rusk said:

"I do not see that the invitation is at all astanlshing. If may not be romently and a stanlshing.

or. Rusk said:
"I do not see that the invitation is at all astonishing. It may not be remembered generally that Col. Ingersoll at one time visited a modern institutional church—one of the meny protection." generally that Col. Ingersoll at one time v.sited a modern institutional church—one of the many practical working churches which are doing grand work for humanity to-day. He was interested in what he saw, expressed admiration of the possibilities of such church activity. In fact he said he would like to join that kind of a church himself. So, why is it at all strange to think that he may be glad to speak from the pulpit of the Militant church, whose creed is the good of humanity. I firmly believe that if there had been an institutional church when Ingersoll was a boy, he would have entered into its work heart and soul, and that he would have been America's greatest divine instead of the greatest enemy of organized Christianity. As it is, he has made people think. The clergy, too, are thinking. The churches may be cold and lifeless. In fact, they make more infidels every year than Ingersoll has made in all his lifetime. They have been negligent of man's temporal needs and well being, thinking only of his spiritual needs. Ingersoll objects to that. Now there is beginning to be a competition among the churches to see which can do the most for men's bodies here in this world."

But the Tide Will Turn With a Restora tion of Confidence.

London, Jan. 17.—At the half yearly meeting to-day of the Union bank of London, the new governor of that institution, F. O. Schuster, said the prevailing impression that the large increase of the stock of gold was due to increased production, was only partially true. It was from the United States, he added, chiefly, that the increase was obtained. The imports from the United States, continued Mr. Schuster, were due to the currency troubles and the want of confidence arising therefrom. But, in his opinion, the trouble would not continue much longer, and when these difficulties were overcome, as he could not but hope they would be sooner or later, the tide might furn the current into the opposite direction, and it might set in with great rapidity and force. Mr. Schuster said it was true that Mrs. Langtry had brought an action to recover for the loss of her jewels, which were entrusted to the care of the bank, and which were obtained from it on a forged order. Mr. Schuster added, however, that the bank was resisting Mrs. Langtry's claims. The jewels have variously estimated to be of the value of from $50,000 to $200,000.

THE HUNGARIAN KNGDOM.

Great preparations are in progress for the celebration of the millennial anniversary of the foundation of the Hungarian Kingdom, which will take place next year. The festivities are to last twelve months, and are planned on lines worthy of what is really a great national event. They will comprise a great national exhibition at Pesth, the opening of the new parliament building, erected at a cost of $6,000,000, and which situated on the bank of the Danube, facing the lofty slopes of Buda, surpasses in magnificence even the British houses of parliament in Westminster, while in July next the channel at the iron gates of the Danube, upon which Hungary has spent no less than $15,000,000, is to be thrown open to international navigation in the presence less than $15,000,000, is to be thrown open to international navigation in the presence of the Emperors of Austria and Germany. This, indeed, may be regarded as destined to constitute the culminating point of the celebration, for the importance of this great work was already recognized in the time of the Roman Emperor Trajan, who even began the construction of this channel, many traces of the ancient Roman workings being still in existence.—New York Tribune.

District and Metropolitan railways keep mostly to the north side of the Thames. But South London has its electric underground, the only one of the kind, I believe, in existence, though there are electric trains almost everywhere now, except in London, and probably Liverpool is not alone in its electric elevated. I myself have never had occasion to use it, but curiosity led me once to make a journey along its entire length. The trip is made in a quarter of an hour, and trains run every three minutes. I believe as yet there are but ten trains in all, but as each makes the round trip in half an but as each makes the round trip in half an hour, a larger number could hardly be managed. The journey for the unaccustomed has an element of novelty. You are carried down to the platform and up again to the street level in an elevator.

There is no division of classes, and the cars are built somewhat on the model of street cars; three are attached to each engine. I found the light—though it may have been a chance that one day—atrociously bad, the jolting dreadful, and the stations clean and dull compared to those on the ordinary underground. For, of course, there is no smoke, and the tiled walls are immaculately clean; as up and down lines have each a separate tube or tunnel, there is a platform but to one side, and it is made as narrow and contracted as may be; while it is the one place where London is as silent as M. No less than wonderful are the cures accomplished by Hood's Sarsaparilla, even after other preparations and physician's prescriptions have failed. The reason, however, is simple. When the blood is enriched and purified, disease disappears and The absence of smoke is an advantage in

THE OLD PUMPKINS.

How People Used to Travel Between Vitoria and the Sound in Fifty-Fve, When the steamer City of Kingston was on the Quartermaster dry dock the other day, an old timer was standing on the Yesler dock, Seattle, listening to people grumbling because the boat was not run-gel? That's nuthin'. He ought to have been here when the 'Pumpkins' used to run."

"The Pumpkins?' exclaimed a bystander. What on earth's that?"

"The Pumpkins? Oh, we just called her that," was the response. Her name was the Major Tompkins.

This bit of information is not in possession of many of the present steamboatmen, but the "Pumpkins," in her day, was a great craft. Her trips were always full of delays. She would leave Olympia at 2 p.m. and would not reach Fort Stellacoom until 5. The transfer of freight and waiting for favorable tides often kept her there until 8 to 19 o'clock, and the following day she would steam slowly into Seattle hartor, just twenty-four hours after she left Olympia. The next morning she would reach Port Townsend, and the "dispatch" of business there required a stop of eleven hours or more. On her last trip the Tompkins, left Olympia on about the schedule as above outlined, February 8, 1855. After reaching Port Townsend at 3 a.m. on the 10th, and starting to Victoria at 2 p.m. by way of Widby Island, where she landed Col. Ebey, she encountered a squall and turned back to Port Townsend for shelter. When the wind quieted down she again started for Victoria. At 11 p.m. the captain thinking he was near Esquimalt, headed in shore, but the breakers were found to be but a few feet ahed. The anchor was dropped, but it did not hold, and the vessel instantly crashed against the rocks. The crew and passengers immediately climebd upon the reef, which jutted above the waves, to escape with their lives, and they did not have any time to spare, for the sea at once carried away the deck enclosure. All hands reached Victoria in the middle of the ofternoon on the following day.—Seattle Times.
