Mr. Hewson was president last year of the New Brunswick Bar Association.

The New Brunswick Bar Association at their annual meeting last evening failed to reach a decision on the often discussed question of the placing of other law schools on the same basis with King's College Law School and allowing their graduates to be admitted as attorneys without standing the society's usual examinations.

The matter was discussed until considerable length and until midnight by the members of the profession who gathered for the meeting, the suggestion being made that graduates of Dalhousie, Harvard and Yale Law Schools be put on the same standing with those from King's College. Finally, the matter was left to a committee consisting of the registrar, Dr. T. C. Allen, J. D. Powell, K. C., and H. C. and the whole question of the standing generally of the schools of law with the society.

CAPTAIN SCOTT'S TRAGIC END CROWNS CAREER WON IN ICE

No Less an Authority than Sir Ernest Shackleton, Says Scott was Greatest Authority on Southern Seas—How Ill-fated Expedition was Planned for.

Whatever may have been the fate of the Scott expedition, its leader has won a place for himself in the history of polar exploration, says the Toronto Mail and Empire. To have reached the South Pole before Amundsen would have been a great feat, to have reached it independently a few weeks later would have been hardly less notable, and to die in the quest would fittingly crown a great career won in the ice and desolation of the Antarctic.

Scott was the first to explore the great southern ice barrier to a distance of 400 miles, and to push into the indentation of the Antarctic known as Ross' Sea. He easily held the record for progress toward the South Pole until Sir Ernest Shackleton so brilliantly took it from him, and Shackleton was the first to admit that Scott's knowledge of the Southern Seas was superior to his own, and that his fellow countryman was better fitted than any living man to reach the final goal.

Amundsen's Great Exploit.

How Amundsen by a sensational dash deprived the British explorer of this supreme honor is a matter of history, and all credit is due him for a gallant fight against odds that seemed overwhelming to such a slight expedition as that which set out on board the Fram. Hopes of the British people were dashed at the news of Amundsen's great exploit, but they warmed again when it was learned that Scott and several of his party meant to spend an extra year on the Antarctic Continent and make another dash for the goal in the winter of 1911.

In the South as in the North, it is possible to approach the Pole only for a few months of the year, and if the opportunity passes it is necessary to wait a twelvemonth before the attempt is repeated. Whether Scott knew of Amundsen's success until he was almost at the Pole is to be doubted. The two explorers approached the centre from different directions, and it is possible that it was not until he stood at the Pole itself that he realized another had been there before him.

A Great Expedition.

The Scott expedition was a result of the enthusiasm aroused by the successful Shackleton expedition, which approached to within a few miles of the south pole, and returned bringing a vast quantity of scientific information. The plan was to approach the pole by the sea route, and to return by the land route. The enthusiasm could hardly have been less had Shackleton actually reached the pole, and the Scott expedition was planned on a scale that was almost unprecedented. The expedition was planned on a scale that was almost unprecedented. The expedition was planned on a scale that was almost unprecedented.

THE VALLEY RAILWAY

To the Editor of The Standard.

Sir—I have been much amused at the letters regarding the Valley Railway. I agree with your friend, S. L. Peters, that the railway should go down the east side of the river, crossing at Oak Point, thence down the valley of the peninsula to Barrow's Bluff and thence to the channel. The greatest depth of water in the channel is only 100 feet, and it is quite shoal from both shores for some distance.

There is a large gravel deposit at the bluff also rock which could be used for filling in.

A man who has had years of experience told me: "You would be astonished how quickly a good company would put a bridge across. They would fill out almost to the channel with a steam shovel and land in from both shores with so much good material on the ground."

I see Mr. Peters gives several routes for the railway, but there is nothing mentioned about the peninsula. I can't understand it not being mentioned as I believe the representatives of the 350. In fact there were two survey parties here and went over the route. Whether a report was made of it or not is a mystery to the 350 signers of said petition.

The people on the peninsula do not want the railway in the hope of making personal gain by it running through their land, but I am informed that most, if not all, will give free rights of way.

It is claimed the route is eight miles shorter than the Ferry Point. I, as well as the 350 who signed the petition, feel we should get the railway as at present we are completely isolated. When the ice makes and breaking up we have neither telegraph, telephone or railway to connect us with outside. We used to have Ferry Point bridge in case of life or death, but since that has been carried away we cannot get to St. John at certain times without driving to Hampton and taking the train, or answering back the distance we drive, the distance of course depending on how near we live to St. John on the peninsula.

Regarding my friend, O. A. Flewelling's remark that from Westfield to Oak Point would be fine for Greater St. John for residences, as tourists government and by private individuals the good ship Terra Nova was chartered and the expedition was set under way. It was on June 1, 1910, that the ship, an old Dundee whaler, which had been refitted for the work, sailed from London. It was generally conceded that this was the best equipped expedition that ever left for the south, for the ship carried on board some 60 men and supplies to last them three years.

Amundsen's Sudden Resolve.

At that time Scott had no idea that there would soon be another Roland in the field. In fact, when the Fram left Norway it was announced that the purpose of Amundsen was to cruise in northern waters on a general exploration, the chief prize having been already secured by Peary. It must have been somewhat of a surprise to Scott, therefore, when he met the Fram coasting along the great ice barrier near McMurdo Sound. When spoken, Amundsen admitted that his purpose was to reach the pole if he could do so, and the adventurers separated, wishing each other good luck.

In England when news of the real purpose of Amundsen's voyage became known there was some tendency to criticize him for having attempted to steal a march upon his rival, which was considered, not unimportantly, perhaps, but unscientific. However, there is no evidence that the Norwegian took any unfair advantage of his rival, and there is no longer any justification to withhold from him full praise for his exploit.

An Extra Year.

The plans which Scott laid when he left London in 1910 seem to have been adhered to with the slight difference that the return was made nearly a year later than was intended. Slightly more than a year ago the Terra Nova returned to civilization with the news that Scott was staying on and did not expect to return before 1913. Almost simultaneously the news came that Amundsen had succeeded.

LOCAL LIQUOR CASE IN SUPREME COURT

Fairville Matter is Taken Up and Judgment Reserved—
Grand Falls Assessment Suit
Postponed Until April.

Fredericton, Feb. 12.—The Supreme Court on banc resumed its session this morning, taking up the case ex parte Margaret Tattler in re Allen W. Chapman, solicitor, in which Mr. Hughes moved for an order to pay over money.

Mr. Philney, K. C., contra. Court considers.

The Grand Falls assessment case, in which the new power company there is defendant, has the first on the crown paper. This had been postponed from last term, when Mr. Taylor, on behalf of the prosecuting company, moved to quash the assessment of some $1,400 on the company's lands there by the town. During vacation affidavits had been prepared on behalf of the town by Messrs. Winslow and Messrs. Gregory and Winslow, solicitors for the Grand Falls Power Company, had, at a town meeting there, admitted that the company owned the land assessed, but this company, he said, was distinct from the Grand Falls Water and Power Company, represented upon the assessment by Messrs. Winslow and Messrs. Gregory, which the assessment had been made. These affidavits had not been served till late in January, when the president of the company, Sir Wm. Van Horne, had gone to the West Indies and having been so delayed the appellants were deprived of proper means to contradict them. Mr. Taylor therefore claimed the right to postpone till the April sittings of the court, to meet and answer the statements in the affidavits. He would show the alleged statements were not true, or if so, were without authority.

Mr. Hughes opposed the motion on the ground that the advantage of this payment in making out its assessment for the ensuing year, and he set forth the claim of estoppel against the appellants.

In view of the two months' delay in getting the town affidavits ready the court allowed the desired postponement till April.

A Fairville liquor case of keeping for sale followed. A. A. Wilson showing cause against a rule nisi to quash a writ of Habeas Corpus issued by W. H. Allingham ex parte David Keefe, Mr. Harrison supporting the rule. The evidence went to show that seventeen bottles of whisky had been seized by the police and had been taken to the police station. Operation for Piles Failed

Zam-Buk Was Then Tried and Worked a Cure.

Writing from Poplar, B. C. Mrs. C. Hanson, wife of the proprietor of the Commercial Hotel, says: "I suffered for years with bleeding piles. The piles were so bad at times that I could hardly walk, and ordinary remedies seemed utterly unable to give me any ease. Finally I decided to undergo an operation, and went to the Sacred Heart Hospital in Spokane. There they performed an operation and did all they could for me. For a time I was certainly better, but within 12 months the trouble started again and the piles became as painful as ever. I tried liniments, hot poultices, various 'pile cures,' and indeed everything I could think would be likely to do any good, but still I continued to suffer, and the shooting, burning, stinging pains, the dull, aching and wretched 'worn-out' feeling that the disease causes continued as bad as ever.

"One day I read about Zam-Buk and thought I would try it. The first one or two boxes gave me more ease than anything else I had tried, so I went on with the treatment. In a short time I began to feel altogether different and better, and I saw that Zam-Buk was going to cure me. Well, I went on using it, and by the time I had used six boxes I was delighted to find myself entirely cured. That was three years ago, and from then to the present time there has been no return of the trouble."

Zam-Buk is a sure cure for piles, eczema, ulcers, abscesses, cold sores, chapped hands, varicose sores, burns, scalds, bruises, inflamed patches, and all skin injuries and diseases. Drugists and stores everywhere, 50c box, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse harmful substitutes.
