

Compare the taste of Schlitz in BROWN BOTTLES with beer in light bottles

Schlitz is as pure when poured into your glass as when it left the brewery. It's the Brown Bottle. It keeps out the light. Light develops in beer a peculiar taste and a disagreeable odor.

This is not a theory. It is a fact proven by scientists. Schlitz is properly aged before leaving the brewery.

It will not cause biliousness, nor ferment in your stomach.

Schlitz in Brown Bottles costs you no more than common beer in light bottles.

PUBLIC PLAYGROUND WILL CLOSE TOMORROW

Children of Centennial Playground will Carry Out Interesting Programme to Mark Season's Closing.

The vacation days for the school children are fast drawing to a close, and with the close of vacation comes also the termination of the season for the playgrounds.

With the addition of two new grounds, the children of the city who are not fortunate enough to be able to spend the summer in the country, have been given an opportunity to spend the vacation days enjoyably, and profitably as well. The different playgrounds have for the past few weeks presented an animated spectacle, and the attendance has been large at all.

Tomorrow will see the closing of the supervised playgrounds at the Centennial school, after a most successful season of eight weeks. To mark the closing of the grounds an interesting programme has been arranged and will be carried out in the presence of parents of the children and teachers. Among those who will probably be present are His Worship Mayor Frink, Dr. Bridges, Miss Mabel Peters, president of the supervised playgrounds association, and other prominent citizens.

The programme includes matches, vocal selections and recitations. Following this there will be an exhibition of the fancy work made by the children, and a sale of baskets on the premises. For these there has been a great demand.

The programme and the names of those taking part follow:

Chorus by playground children.
Solo by Cecil Cohen.
Recitation by Constance Carney.
Solo by Dolly Weisel.
Address by his worship the mayor.
Solo by Mimi Keenan.
Supervisors' report by Miss Maxwell.
Recitation by Florence and Ruth Calneiss.
Solo by Yetta Tanzman.
Address by Dr. Bridges.
Solo by Vera Caplan.
March and drill by 20 playground children.
Address by Miss Peters.

Indoor baseball exhibition game under the supervision of Mr. Manning. The closing exercises will begin at 2:30 sharp and it is hoped by those in charge that parents and the general public will be present in large numbers to lend their encouragement to the children in their efforts.

CITY OF THE LOYALISTS EYES ARE WELCOME TO DUKE OF CONNAUGHT

The hundreds of people who were on German street all eager to see the Royal party awaited their until after the service and had another view of the Duke and Princess as they left the church and drove down German street en route to the Earl Grey.

Inspected Artillery. Arriving at the German street entrance to Trinity church, the Duke inspected the men of the 2nd Regiment of Artillery as they marched past on their way to St. Mary's church, with Col. Baxter at their head. The Duke and the Princess, followed by the lady-in-waiting, and Col. Lowther, walked up the pathway toward the doorway to the church.

A few minutes after the Royal party took their seats, the surprised choir entered singing, followed by the rector, Rev. R. A. Armstrong, the curate, Rev. Percy Culhane, and the Bishop of Fredericton. The church by this time was crowded, and as the people were still trying to get in, the Bishop read the scriptural lessons and made the announcements for the week. The choral service was of unusual excellence and was much appreciated by the great gathering.

Elloquent Sermon by Bishop. Bishop Richardson preached an eloquent and striking sermon on the significance of religious dependency, and the means of overcoming it. He took his text from the 42nd chapter and 11th verse of the Psalms: "Why art thou cast down, O my soul? and why art thou disquieted within me? Hope in God, for I shall yet praise Him who is the health of my countenance and my God."

"These," he said, "were the words of an unbroken poet. They were the words of a man in exile, looking back to the days of happiness, pouring out his soul in bitterness and regret. He was like a man who has been sorrowful because of the darkness that enveloped him. There was nothing about religious dependency. Incomprehensible with a truly religious life. Constant strain and labor and worry brought a weariness and lassitude which led to spiritual depression. All were so affected, because between the great life and the little life there was no great difference. It was a spiritual dependency in one form or another belonged to all religious life. Only among men of the religious life does dependency know its only cure. It is the man who had hope and trust. Skeptic knew nothing of it. If our faith was nothing, spiritual dependency would not come to us. It is religion that makes it possible.

It meant to see darkness all around him, but he refused to yield to despair or lose sight of the foundations upon which his faith was built.

A Great Problem. There were plenty of people whose religious life was made unhappy because they were born to see shadows where they ought to see sunshine. If this be true, it might be asked: Why did God send souls into the world freighted with gloom? Where is the justice of it? men asked in their impatience.

The problem was a great one; it involved great consequences. But the answer was, it could not be otherwise. It was God's purpose to create man in His own image and enable him to glorify his maker. He had to find some way by which men could transmit to their children the qualities acquired in the fight against evil. So He works through the great law of heredity. All of us are haunted by the ghosts of dead passions; the struggles of our fathers shaped our lives. Heredity is a law for good, as well as for evil; it makes more for the growth of character than the transmitting of weakness. It is something that comes with no continuity of character. No moral progress would be possible. Every one born into the world would have to make a start from the first.

When we are told that men and women are born into the world under the handicap of gloom, we should remember that the test of character is not success but struggle. There is another consideration—the difference between character and temperament. The latter is a heritage, made up of the dead passions and qualities of our ancestors. It is something that comes to us from the past. Character, you can make for yourself; it is a product of personality.

A Message of Hope. In spiritual dependency there is something temperamental—a natural disposition to look upon the dark side. But if you drag dependency before the bar of reason, be sure there is something in you which will struggle with the gloom, we should refuse to accept in hopefulness and enthusiasm and courage and your life will be a better and brighter one. There are sad people in the world whose dependency is due to disappointment and discouragement. They followed some great aim, and never attained it. They had some great ambition, and did not achieve it. They cherished some great hope and it vanished. Nothing is more commonplace, or more pitiable than such experiences. There are those who sought to help their fellowmen and saw ridicule heaped upon their efforts, their motives impugned, their character questioned. The world is full of men and women who have had sad experiences.

Has the church any message for such as these? Yes. In the words of the psalmist is the message: Hope, thou in God. These troubles of yours are real. There is nothing make believe about them. They are not spirits summoned from the vasty deep. You have not met the evil, and you have suffered. These things, bitter and disappointing, have happened.

SEARCHING FOR PERMANENCY

Change and decay is the law of life. Men seek something permanent. Some seek it in nature which seems to look us up in its permanence. But nature is not permanent—it will pass away. The heavens will roll away like a shrivelled scroll, the solid globe will melt away. Can you be satisfied with nature? Men want something really permanent. They want to know that at the broad background of life stands God; they want to feel the strong certainty that they are sustained by a power that gives human life its substantiality.

At the conclusion of the church service the royal party entered the carriage and proceeded to Reed's Point, where they took boat for their ship.

An Auto Drive. In the afternoon about 3 o'clock, the Royal party, headed at Reed's Point, and went for an automobile tour to Grand Bay.

Four automobiles were provided for the trip, one owned by Dr. W. W. White, another by the Norton Griffiths Company, and two from the Pugsley garage. The Duke and Duchess were in the first automobile, that owned by W. W. White, and the Princess Patricia, and a lady-in-waiting in the second car, one from the Pugsley garage. Officers of the ship were in the other two cars.

The party proceeded up Prince William street, Main street and Douglas avenue to Grand Bay. On their way back they were saluted by a party of Grand Bay Orangemen who were lined up in the roadside as they passed. The Royal party spent the evening on the ship.

Official Entry Today. Today His Royal Highness and party will officially enter the city and receive an official civic welcome.

At 10:45 a. m. a landing will be made at Reed's Point, and from there the Vice Regal party will be escorted by a detachment of dragoons to the Court House. The route of the procession will be Prince William street, Queen street, Charlotte street, North Side King Square and Sydney street.

The Court House Ceremony. The ceremonies at the court house will consist of a presentation of a civic address of welcome by Mayor Frink and the introduction of members of the city council and others to His Royal Highness. At the close of these ceremonies the procession will be continued through the following streets: Sydney, Waterloo, City Road, Wall, Rockland Road past Fort Howe to Main, out Douglas Avenue, across the Suspension Bridge, thence by Lancaster Road past Martello Tower to St. John street, Ludlow, Rodney to the ferry. Arriving again on the East Side of the harbor the royal party will be driven along Water street to Market Square, up King to German and thence to the Union Club. At the club a luncheon has been arranged for the governor general, and will take place at one o'clock.

Will Entertain the Princess. A luncheon in honor of Her Royal Highness the Princess Patricia of Connaught will be given at the residence of Hon. J. D. Hazen at 1 o'clock to-day. Miss Hazen and Miss Frances Hazen will be the hostesses.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught was invited as a guest of honor but was unable to accept on account of recent indisposition.

Will Receive Veterans' Address. The Duke of Connaught has graciously consented to receive an address from the Imperial veterans of the army and navy resident in St. John on the steps of the Union Club, at 2:45 p. m. today.

It is requested that all members assemble at the office of S. Cecil Irvine, 45 Princess street at 2 p. m. Every endeavor should be made to make the parade as strong as possible as a mark of appreciation and loyalty. Medals to be worn.
