Pete, one of the features for several days, broke through 90 in a short time and a similar reaction ran throughout the list. A fair raily followed in short order but in the last hour the market sold off again and made some of the lowest prices of the day. Closing prices were somewhat above the low. Today's statement from the directors of railways said that conditions were improving but slowly.

In one matter, the coaling of ocean vessels decided progress is now being made, the waiting list having been reduced to 90 or less in this harbor as compared with 130 or more a week ago. The sudden break in a superficially promising movement today shows again that while stocks have been well iquidated there is nothing to build a will market on at this time.
