

Sunshine and Roses.

You can always find the sunshine
If you'll only seek and try;
For it's shining up there yonder
In the ever changing sky;
And no matter how far robed in
Or how dark the clouds may be,
There's a cheerful silver lining
Way up there for you and me.
Don't think 'twould be a pity
And his feather is awry,
That his mission here amongst us
Is only squawk and cry;
You just wait until you hear him,
And then choose unto one;
He'll sing you into thinking
That your life has just begun.
When you see a bud a-growin'
On a pond as black as night,
Don't let all the thoughts of beauty
In your mind be put to flight;
But just wait till it changes
And almost before you know
'Twill turn out to be a lily,
White and pure as silent snow.
So keep your heart a singin',
Be it spring or be it fall,
For there's a sunshine, yes, and roses,
In the world, enough for all;
And no matter how far robed in
Or how dark the clouds may be,
There's a cheerful silver lining
Way up there for you and me.

A Trying Experience.

A NOVA SCOTIA FARMER SUFFERED FOR FIFTEEN YEARS.

Consulted Four Doctors, But the Only Relief They Gave Him Was Through Injections of Morphine—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Restored Him to Health and Activity.

From the News, Truro, N.S.

Mr. Robert Wright, of Altou, Colchester Co., N.S., is now one of the healthiest and happiest working farmers of this section. But Mr. Wright was not always blessed with perfect health; as a matter of fact for some fifteen years he was a martyr to what appeared to be an incurable trouble. In conversation lately with a News reporter, Mr. Wright said:—"I am indeed grateful that the trouble which bothered me for so many years is gone, and I am quite willing to give you the particulars for publication. It is a good many years since my trouble first began, slight at first, but later intensely severe pains in the back. Usually the pains attacked me when working or lifting, but often when not at work at all. With every attack the pains seemed to grow worse, until finally I was confined to the house, and there for five long months was bed ridden, and much of this time could not move without help. My wife required to stay with me constantly, and became nearly exhausted. During the time I was suffering thus I was attended by four different doctors. Some of them pronounced my trouble lumbago, others sciatica, but they did not cure me, nor did they give me any relief, save by the injection of morphine. For years I suffered thus, sometimes confined to bed, at other times able to go about and work, but always suffering from the pain, until about three years ago when I received a new lease of life, and a freedom from the pain that had so long tortured me. It was at this time that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People were brought to my attention and I got two boxes. The effect seemed marvellous and I got six boxes more, and before they were all used I was again a healthy man and free from pain. It is about three years since I was cured, and during that time I have never had an attack of the old trouble, and I can therefore strongly testify to the sterling quality of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Since they did such good work for me I have recommended them to several people for various ailments, and the pills have always been successful. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure by going to the root of the disease. They renew the nerves, thus driving disease from the system. Avoid imitations by insisting that every box you purchase is enclosed in a wrapper bearing the full trade mark, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People."

Business Women.

A few decades ago a woman was ostracized and ridiculed for making any effort toward self support. Now she is encouraged to earn her own living and is respected for the endeavor. Her energy, executive ability and talents are recognized everywhere, and society no longer looks scornfully at a bread-winner of its own class.

All honor to the business woman of old, who, by breaking down the barriers of conventionality, made possible this golden age. It is to them we owe a debt of gratitude for giving up the opportunity to make a business career as honorable a vocation as that of our fathers and brothers.

Courage, you women who dread the first step toward self support. Enter the business world with confidence, and have no fear of adverse criticism. Your example will help other clever and capable women who are rag-rat to work, but too timid to make the effort.—Housewife.

Truths For Girls.

Never mind about the dimples if there's a sunshine in your smile.
At least one little set of kindness a day and an easy pillow at night.
How many thoughtful days for mother's comfort do you give?
Neatness of dress first, and style may come as an afterthought.
Ours from a day when she's in her teens will wrinkle a girl's forehead like a cross by the time she is 30.
Try making yourself as agreeable to your brother as if he were some other girl's brother. It will pay to win his brother's love.

"Willie Wilkins is a generous little soul," said Tommy Tompkins' mother. "He only had a slight attack of measles, but he gave it to every one of my four children."

College Women.

The question that has so often been discussed in various journals without any definite conclusion being reached, as to whether a college course for a woman operates, as a general rule, as a serious drawback to her prospects of marriage, and that statistics could be furnished as to the average number of marriages among college trained women, and vice versa, was recently put to a learned professor in Newcomb college, says the New York Pioneer.

The learned professor in question smiled and said that, far from proving detrimental to a girl's matrimonial prospects, a college course seems, on the contrary, to better fit her for the duties of home and family. As to statistics, a comparison of the number of college girls who have married with those who have not and the benefit of such solid training shows that, on the whole, the numbers are about equal.

College bred girls marry later in life, however, than their sisters who have not received such training. This is necessarily the case, as most college girls do not complete their education before 22 or 23 years of age. At Vassar college the average age of the college girls graduating is between 22 and 23. But careful examination of statistics shows that up to 30 years of age the average is quite equal in the number of marriages of girls who have gone to college and those who have not.

As to the happiness of the marriages of college bred women, statistics show that divorces are very rare among married women who have received college training, and consequently the natural conclusion would be that marriages, on the whole, among them are far happier. The professor accounted for this by the fact that college bred women receive more solid all round education; their study of the sciences, mathematics and the languages prevent their training from being one-sided, as the training of the average school girl generally is, as also the training of the self educated woman.

Self educated women, while they are remarkably bright in one particular branch, are prejudiced in favor of that alone, and their training is consequently one-sided. This one-sided education affects the whole character. We find that the woman with facts in, in nine cases out of ten, a self-educated woman or a woman who has not received a college education. College girls rarely have facts. Their complete all round, many sided education prevents this. They see things in their true light, for their training in the sciences, where they are always brought to the investigation of facts, make them accurate judges of fact. Their broad mindedness, and their freedom from prejudice, make them utterly impossible for them to take up a fact as such. The training in the sciences and mathematics and the languages, moreover, gives them a well-balanced mind, and they judge of things calmly and impartially, as their superior training teaches them.

College training, moreover, gets self control and a perfect discipline of temper. Hence, when she marries, the college bred woman has already learned human nature, its faults and foibles and does not expect too much of poor humanity. She has learned that no being is absolutely perfect. Consequently she must not look for absolute perfection in her husband, any more than she acts and thinks the theory that each must bear with the other.

Her splendid all round education again makes her a fitting companion for the educated man. Too often men find in the beautiful dolls they have married, women who cannot rise to their own intellectual plane, and after a time this lack of power to give thought for thought and the man by reason of his busy life in the world is naturally outgrowing his wife in sentiment and interests too often proves the beginning of that—

Little rift within the lute
That by and by shall make the music mute
And ever widening slowly silence all

Women often complain that they do not know anything of their husbands' business affairs, that their husbands fail to make confidants of them. The reason of this often lies in the fact that the husband meets with no response, no sympathy from his wife; soon discovers that she, from lack of thorough or proper educational training is unable to understand. And so he keeps his affairs to himself, not because he wants to, for men long for sympathy in this as in other things, but because of his wife's utter lack of comprehensive interest.

Is Run By Women.

This is the way a Star staff correspondent tells of his experience in Battle, Kan., on a day when the thermometer was way up in the shade:
"Nearest glass of beer," I inquired of a sad-looking man on the station platform.
He grinned and pointed to a sign up the street which said "Saloon."

"CLOSED BY ORDER OF THE MAYOR."

"What's the trouble?"
"Trouble!" repeated another and faced man. "Lor, that isn't the name for it!"

"We've got a lady mayor, lady council and lady clerk. They're running things. This town is going to the devil."

Afterward, when I met Mayor Elizabeth Totten, she told me that this man was mistaken. The town had been going to the devil up to April 4. But prior the Lord, since that date she thought it had been going the other way.

When the Calla Lily begins to bloom, if the pots are placed into shallow pans of water and left there, the blooms will be found to last much longer and remain more plump and fresh than where water is simply applied to the surface of the soil.

IMPORTANT Statement from a Postmaster. Paine's Celery Compound Saved His Life Years Ago.

HAS NOT BEEN ILL A SINGLE DAY SINCE HE WAS CURED.

If there are dealers who in the past have questioned the efficacy of Paine's Celery Compound in saving life, they must, after carefully reading Mr. Kilbride's second letter, come to the conclusion that the great medicine is worthy of closer thought and attention than they were disposed to give it weeks or months ago.

Mr. P. J. Kilbride, postmaster of Inverness, P. E. I., is no idle life speculator, neither has his important testimony been unduly obtained. This second letter, vouching for a permanent and lasting cure, is allowed to be made public for the advantage and weal of thousands of sufferers who are anxiously looking for new life and freedom from the power of disease. Mr. Kilbride says:

"Heavens!" exclaimed the female villain, "telling visibly. 'Is it possible that I have forgotten to remove the ticket from that remnant sale hat?"

Mr. Just—I was reading about cooking with electricity, as I hung the chops on the electric bell, and I've been pushing the button for half an hour, but it doesn't seem to work.

"A musician out of work, are you?"

said the housekeeper. "Well, you'll find a few cords in the woodshed. Suppose you favor me with an obligato."

Very independent—A. Kincardine-shire man was complimenting his minister on his personal virtues, and wound up a perverted appreciation with the remark:—"I always liked your sterling independence, sir. I have always said that ye neither fear God nor man."

"Ah!" replied the pious boarder, "that must be the piece that passed understanding."

We have seen several "youngsters" of mature age, whose memories were just about as long as that of the little boy who was munching a piece of ginger-bread. His mother inquired who he was, and the youngster gave it to me. "And did you thank her for it?" inquired the mother. "Yes—I did, but I did not tell her so!" was the decided, and no doubt truthful reply.

A certain member of parliament, as proud and fond as a man should be of his beautiful young wife, was just about going to speak in a debate, when a telegram was put into his hands. He read it, left the House, jumped into a cab, drove to Charing Cross, and took the train to Dover. Next day he returned home, rushed into his wife's room, and finding her there, upstairs, the astonished lady in no measured words protested her ignorance of having done anything to offend him.

"Then what did you mean by your telegram?" he asked.

"Mean? What I said, of course. What are you talking about?"

"Oh, at it for yourself," said he.

She read: "I flee with Mr. X. to Dover straight. Pray for me."

"For a moment word would not come; then, after a merry fit of laughter, the suspect's wife quietly remarked:

"Oh those terrible telegraph people! No wonder you are out of your mind. I telegraphed him simply 'I flee with Mr. X. to Dover Street. Stay for me.'"

A CARD.

I, the undersigned, do hereby agree to refund the money on a twenty-five cent bottle of Dr. Williams' English Pills, if, after using three-fourths of contents of bottle, they do not relieve Constipation and Headache. GEORGE V. RAND, Druggist, Wolfville, N. S.

"Nearly six years ago Paine's Celery Compound cured me—in fact, saved my life. At this time I am still feeling well and have not been ill a single day since I used your famous Compound. I only own my present health and strength to Paine's Celery Compound; it saved me from insanity and the grave. I shall never forget the awful state I was in before I used your great life restorer. Now I can sleep and eat well, for which I thank God and your wonderful curing medicine. I have answered over two hundred and fifty letters written to me after my first testimonial letter was published. These letters have come from all parts of Canada and the United States.

Lord Rosebery.

Thus concluded a recent speech; I conclude to my conclusion, and with that I will detain you no longer. It is this—that we have so much on our shoulders, we have such heavy work to do, we have so much to carry, that we cannot at this critical time, that we cannot at this critical juncture afford to waste time in polemical discussions. I know that that is a very unpopular doctrine from a party point of view. (No, no) but, (here Lord Rosebery raised his arms to convey additional emphasis) I do not care one jot or one tittle whether it is unpopular or not. (Lord cheers) When I think of this little island of ours, floating as it were, so lonely in these northern seas, riven with such jealousy, with such hostility, with such foiled ambition by the great empires of the world, so friendless amongst nations which count their armies by unbelated millions—when I think of this little island, of the work which it has undertaken, of the empire that it has founded and which it is determined to maintain—(loud cheers) when I think of this, of our expenditure—112 millions a year in time of peace—the high pressure under which we live, of the responsibilities we have undertaken, I confess I have no hesitation in recurring to the opinion of Chatham and saying once more to my people, 'Forget every thing for the public.' (Cheers) I do not voice with any dismay or distrust the responsibilities or the engagements of which I have spoken so long as we remain a united people. As our Shakespeare says:—

Importance of Knowing.

Many of the farmers remain poor and unsuccessful for the simple reason that they always "guess" at everything. They, for instance, keep a half-dozen cows, three of which may not begin to pay for the cost. They never take pains to weigh the milk and test it, and compare the food consumed with the milk and butter fat produced, so as to know, with certainty, whether such cow is profitable, or whether only three of them are, while the others are being fed at a positive loss. In these days of sharp competition, it is absolutely necessary for the farmer to be exact, and that he have the most definite knowledge upon which to base all his calculations. He must figure closely or he will soon find himself blaming Providence and bemoaning his luck. A farmer should not scoff at novel systems or processes but should always endeavor to acquaint himself with the latest and best practices. Figures don't lie, rules are absolute; but "guesses" are too often swayed by preconceived ideas or prejudices. Don't trust to chance, but get the facts, and good judgment and a steady purpose. The visionary, untested man, who is covetous of what his neighbor has honestly earned, will always be complaining of hard times and bad luck. Remember that there is no money to be made in farming to-day except by employing the most up-to-date methods and in every way keeping thoroughly abreast with the times.

Have You Catarrh?

If you are troubled with Catarrh and wish to be cured, use Catarrhazone, which is a guaranteed cure for this distressing disease. There is no mystery about Catarrhazone, though its effects are magical. Ointments and snuffs cannot reach the diseased parts and have thus proved useless, but Catarrhazone is carried by the air you breathe directly to the diseased parts, where it is so effective, killing the germ life and healing the sore spots. It cures by inhalation. No danger, no risk. Sold by all druggists or by mail, price $1.00. For trial outfit and literature, send 10c. to N. C. FOLSON & CO., Box 618, Kingston, Ont.

It Was Too True.

A temperance lecturer was preaching on his favorite theme. "Now, boys, when I ask you a question, you must not be afraid to speak up and answer me. When you look around and see these fine houses, farms and cattle, do you ever think who owns them all now? Your fathers own them, do they not?"

"Yes, sir," shouted a hundred voices. "Where will your fathers be in 20 years?"

"Dead," shouted the boys.

"That's right. And who will own this property then?"

"Us boys," shouted the trunks.

"Right. Now tell me, did you ever in going along the street, notice the drunkards lazing around the public house door, waiting for some one to treat them?"

"Yes, sir, lots of them."

"Where will they be in twenty years from now?"

"Dead," exclaimed the boys.

"And who will be drunkards then?"

"Us boys,"
