AMERICAN PRESS OPINIONS.

"It puts clearly and cogently the subject of the duty of those who have means, to those who have not, of employers and benefactors to employés and beneficiaries, and again of the latter to the former, in the light which shines from the Cross of Christ. The story is full of interest from cover to cover."—The Evangelist.

"The story is well written, intensely interesting, and should incline the hearts of readers to take a wider view of this great problem.

—The Episcopal Recorder.

"The story is written with true sympathy, and a desire to bridge the chasm between employer and employé."—The Outlook.

"Presents to view several strong characters, and deals a heavy blow against merely selfish solutions of the problems involved in the labor question."—New York Observer.
