The Farmer of the Future

Mr. C. S. Funk in a recent magazine article has a glowing picture of what farming will be in future years. I don't know who this Mr. Funk is. Perhaps he never lived on a farm. If he had I don't believe he would be so optimistic about the early consummation of his "dream." He has certainly set a high ideal for us. Evidently, however, Mr. Funk does realize some of the weaknesses of pointed comments on the greatest weakness of all, parsimony in dealing with the family. Here is what he says:

"He (the farmer) must be enlightened enough to know that it is good sense and good economy to have a comfortable home. Thousands of farmers are paying annual doctors' bills sufficient to establish their families in comfort.

"A woman carrying water one hundred yards from a pump, and wood two hundred feet from the kitchen, travels a good many miles in a year. A girl who spends eight or ten hours a week pumping water, turning a churn or separator, etc., can occupy her time not only to better advantage to herself but to greater actual profit.

"The farmer who loses one or two of his boys just at the time he needs them most, because they would rather wear good clothes in the town or city and earn wages, than to saw wood, huck corn, and do the other heavy, rough work on the farm, nine times out of ten has only himself to blame.

"It is nature for boys and girls to remain in their original surroundings, and they leave them only because of superior attractions elsewhere. These attractions generally mean a pleasanter and more congenial manner of earning a living.

"Agriculture of the future must make the farm the most attractive place for the boys and the girls as well as for the father and the mother. This is not only good sense but good business. It pays in money."

Pretty hot shot that. Wish some of my previous bosses would read it. But then their skins are pretty thick when improved conditions that involve decreasing their precious bank accounts are mentioned. Mr. Funk's idea that the trouble is not with the boys and girls but with the farmer is about right.—"Another Hired Man."

This is not a Dream

The best farmer is not necessarily the man who works the hardest with his hands. He is the man who has brains, who is willing to learn every day, who profits by the experience of his neighbors, who keeps in touch with the world and esteems education for its full worth.

Such will be the farmers of the future, and they will make farming a dignified, pleasant and profitable occupation. Their sons and daughters will stay on the farm because no other place can offer more attractions.

The automobile, the telephone, electric lights, labor-saving machinery, comfortable heating, running water, and all the modern living conveniences will strip the towns and frequent trips into the outside world will only make the farm home more pleasant by contrast.

Of Interest to Husbands

Here are a few rules for the use of the husband who would learn how to keep his wife's affection:

Deserve her perfect confidence. Never do anything which will make you appear mean in her eyes.

Let her tell you her grievances, and tell her your worries; you may be able to help each other, and you can surely comfort each other. Try to be as thoughtful of your wife's comfort as you were when you first tried to win her heart; she needs your thoughtfulness more now.

Don't forget all the little courtesies you used to show her and which make you appear so well in her eyes; if there were taught to endear her to you before marriage, she should be a thousand times dearer to you now.

Help her with the children sometimes at night, when they are fretful and you have no hired help. Supposing you do put in the plea that you are tired and that you have been working all day, hasn't she been working all day, too, and isn't she tired?

It pays to advertise. Try it

Here is a Book Worth Having

It tells about cooking from the time the Cave Dwellers used to put hot stones in the pot to boil it. The Book contains interesting information gathered from many sources and is illustrated profusely.

The "Evolution of the Cook Stove" also tells all about the "Dominion Pride" Range. Whether you need a Range just now or not you will enjoy this book. Write for free copy.
