BLAME WRONGLY ATTACHED.

Our Hallowe'en experiences this year bring forcibly to our minds the fact that

The evil that men do lives after them; The good is oft interred with their bones.

No pains were spared on the occasion of the last celebration to make the procession as orderly as possible. The central committee did their best to impress upon the various student bodies the necessity of maintaining a proper dignity in order to win the esteem of the people of the city. Everything came off as planned, the students acquitted themselves most creditably, no depredations were committed after the theaters, and everyone thought that, for once at least, there could be no disparaging remarks about the conduct of students on Hallowe'en. But, sad to say, there have been numerous com-plaints coming in to the committee of broken fences, smashed window-panes and cracked plate glass, which would lead one to believe that there had been considerable damage done by the students. That this was not the case can be readily proven, as each body of students either went home at once on account of the rain or else went to one of the numerous dinners given on that occasior. The fact of the matter is that whenever the students parade they are followed by gangs of hoodlums, whose vandal instincts prompt them to throw stones at every breakable object, under cover of the students' procession. This has been the case on several occasions, and each time no one took the trouble to discriminate between the hoodlums and the students, and the latter were always blamed for every depredation committed. The ac-tions of the students in a few specific cases in past years may lay them some-what open to a charge of this kind, but it is time the people recognized that the tendency for doing things of this kind is fast dying away, and they should give us some credit for it. Even at their wildest, students, although they may have demolished fences and other objects that were unsightly and an eyesore to the city, and for which they sometimes received the thanks of the citizens-even on such occasions they have never been known to descend to such inexcusable deeds as, for instance, the deliberate smashing of windows, of which they have been recently accused. It should, at least, be granted that there is a method in the students' madness, and that they are not out to enjoy the mere destruction of valuables. The noble force of policemen who are mustered out on that occasion seem unable to corral the proper offenders. and the hoodlums usually get all the chance they want to satiate their savage appetites for destruction About remains the students themselves to take the punishment of these offenders in hand and to proceed to wipe them off the face of the earth whenever they attach themselves to our lines. This would afford some outlet for the exuberant spirits always present on these occasions, and would serve the arrival how Toronto students can cheer." 'We had never heard since leaving England such hearty British cheering,' was the verdict which came to my ears."

Toronto students may congratulate themselves on the impression they made by their cheers. However, Professor Wright goes on to note the ef-fect produced by the tooting of horns. It seems that the Royal visitors were unused to this sort of demonstration, and thought the horns were an expres-sion of disfavor, and that they were being "boo'd" as they went along the line. It is not surprising that they thought so, for of all the discordant, blatant, and unmeaning sounds, the blast of a tin horn is the worst, and as it is utterly impossible to put into it any expression of joy or sorrow it is about the least suitable thing for such an occasion as could be imagined. It may save a man's throat a little to blow a horn instead of cheering, but the balance is more than made up by the detrimental effects on his own eardrums and those of his neighbors. The impression given by the students on all occasions of this kind would be better horns, to use a slang phrase, were 'cut out.'

OUR FOOTBALL CHAMPIONS.

The Rugby football players of the University of Toronto have this season written their Alma Mater's name high on the rolls of athletic fame. This has been a record-breaking season, the junior, intermediate, and senior cham-nionships now reposing in our charge Great credit is due to the men who by their faithful efforts and steady training have succeeded in so widely adver tising their University as a live and up to-date one. If it is true that the strength and greatness of a country can be measured by its sports and games, the same ought to apply to a university, and therefore we must conclude that ours is still the best and the most progressive in the country. Al honor to the men who have so nobly upheld her name this season!

In the editorial last week "College Topics and the Union" the sentence, "Thus Varsity . . . is now really the official organ of at most two parties representing a part of the under-graduate body," the word "societies" should be substituted for "parties."

hTe class of '02, University College held their annual reception on Friday last, when the members of the year, together with their guests, participat-ed in a very enjoyable time. This year the seniors, being few in number, and being thus unable to entertain the large crowd usually present at receptions, decided to return to the old plan and hold the reception for the year alone, inviting only the presidents of other years and the ladies on the various executives. Although this made the affair considerably smaller and less elabor-ate, those who were present felt that the change was an agreeable one, the usual crush being prevented and greatr opportunities afforded for becoming

 WYCLIFFE COLLEGE

The Literary Society met in the East Hall on Friday at 7 p.m. A most interesting program was provided. It is intended to institute a series of inter-year debates for the college championship. The first contest will proba-bly teke place in two weeks' time. Professor Dyson Hague, M.A., who leaves shortly to enter upon his new duties in Montreal, was in the chair. Two interesting events are billed for topic, and should afford ample scope for a good contest.
