LANDED IN A.D. 499

Chinese Missionaries Came to America in That Year.

Such are the Records in Pekin—Temples Still to be Found in Mexico.

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 19.—The Chicago Times-Herald publishes the following despatch from Washington:

"The archives of Pekin have given up a secret that may lead to the solution of a mystery that has baffled every student of American archeology since the Western Hemisphere was first visited by Columbus. There has been found in the ancient Eastern capital records that prove conclusively that a landing was made on this continent by the Mogolians in the year 499 A. D., centuries before the Genoese Admiral was born, and before the acceptance of the theory that the earth is a globe led the wise men of Europe to seek a new world in the West.

"Students of early American history have found unmistakable evidence of Asiatic civilization among the forgotten inhabitants of the continent. They have followed these traces through the wonderful works left by the Aztecs, and faintly through the predecessors of the race, the Toltecs.

"They have found what they believed to be proof that this Asiatic influence came to America from the north, successively through what is now California and Lower California, but beyond this there has been nothing but the vaguest speculation, which has given rise to theories as many and as various as the number and the imaginations of those engaged in the research.

"Not long ago it was announced in a despatch from Pekin that some of the officers of the army of the allies had dug up in the sacred city records of great historic value that had been hidden away for ages by the Celestials.

"The direct interest these discoveries have for America is brought through communication just received at the State Department. These come from Ma Tswah Lin, a Chinese, and tells in such a way that the information cannot be doubted of the discovery of America by Chinese missionaries more than fifteen hundred years ago.

"Only meagre details of this great scientific fact have been received here, and what is in the possession of the department officials is being closely guarded. But enough is known to make sure that the message from China sheds a clearer light on information that heretofore has been extremely hazy.

"It may bridge over a chasm of countless forgotten years—years that have had the ages of the world by the ears ever since the ancient works of extinct races were found in old Mexico. The story is that five adventurous missionaries sailed from the eastern coast of China, crossing the Pacific and skirting the Fox Islands, and finally sighting the western coast of the American continent.

"They turned southward and proceeded along, within sight of the shore until a landing was made in Mexico opposite the Peninsula of Yucatan. Here a number of temples were erected in the name of their own God. There is little doubt that these same edifices are described by De Charny in his book as 'Buddhist temples.' This interpretation of the Frenchman, while close to the mark, missed by a margin the authorship of these evidences of an unknown civilization.

"It may not have been Buddha, but probably it was Confucius, who inspired his zealous disciples. They may also clear up the mystery surrounding the astonishing strides of the Aztecs in architecture and industrial arts.

"The supposition is that the Chinese who landed on our continent at that time instilled the natives with their wisdom in craft and the rudimentary arts to such an extent that there resulted a people of peculiarly high development. Be that as it may, the records found in Pekin will not be contradicted and must remain as prima facie evidence of the courage and 'thrift of the Chinamen.'

AN ANGEL IN THE HOUSE.

How sweet it were, if without feeble freight,
Or dying of the dreadful beautiful sight,
An angel came to us, and we could bear
To see him issue from the silent air
At evening in our room, and bend on ours
His divine eyes, and bring us from his bowers
News of dear friends, and children who have never
Been dead, indeed—as we shall know
For ever.

Alas! we think not what we daily see
About our hearths—angels that are to be,
Or may be if they will, and we prepare
Their souls and ours to meet in happy air—
A child, a friend, a wife whose soft
In unison with ours, breeding its future wings.

—Leigh Hunt.

As to Strikers.

"What's the matter with that man?" asked the clock. "He doesn't seem to have anything to do but wind me up."

"No," replied the calendar; "he isn't working. He and his companions struck some time ago."

"Huh! Suppose I should stop working every time I struck?"

"That's so, but I notice it freshens me up every time he takes a month off."

Corroborative Evidence.

Two Ways of Making Clothing!

There are two ways of making clothing: One is by a rule of thumb-haphazard process which produces one thing to-day and another to-morrow and in which the element of certainty and reliability is never present. The other is a process of scientific intelligence and exactness which produces each season high-grade, dependable uniformity and keeps at it, and that's the way our clothing is made.

VOTED AGAINST GIBSON.

A Dominion Government Official Dismissed in Consequence.

Niagara Falls, Nov. 19.—The first result of the general elections has come to the public notice, and a government official has had his position taken away from him without any form of warning or notice. The victim is Neil Black, superintendent of the Government Nursery Stock Fumigating station in the Grand Trunk yards, who voted for E. E. Lacombe and against Mr. Gibson, in Lincoln, making no secret of the fact about it either. Mr. Black, who is a thoroughly competent man, and well posted in his duties, has been succeeded by J. S. Colvard, the well-known post-master and merchant of Southampton.

Cloth=ing Chat

As We Know It

The merits of the cloth in a Suit or Overcoat are a perplexing problem to most people—New goods are a pretty hard thing to size up with accuracy.

A man may look and examine again and again, but in the end he generally has to take the clothier's word for it. So it is easy to see the importance of picking a reliable place to trade.

You can come to this store and make your selections. What you buy will be what we tell you it is. If it's only part wool, we'll say so. If we say it's all wool, it will prove to be all wool.

That Interesting Question
