HOBBY HORSE, A RELIC OF THE OLD ENGLISH MAY DAY REVELS.

Some Interesting Folk-Lore Concerning it-Remnant of the Middle Ages Kept Up By the Sailors At Minehead For the First Three Days of May-How the Horse Is Made and How It Is Used.

A remnant of the Middle ages is still annually kept up at Minehead by the sailors of the little port for the first three days in May. The ancient custom is known as "hobby-horsing," and is supposed to be a relic of the old May day revels when the "hobby-horse" was called the "King of the May." Some affirm that it is a vestige of the old worship of Apollo, the God of the Sun, and the custom is kept up to "celebrate the warmth and gladness which the May sun brings and the disappearance of the coldness and deadness of winter."

The hobby-horse is kept up at Minehead by the fishers, who are pledged to observe three rules. The first is that at the early hour of six o'clock on May day they shall visit a certain cross-road at the west of the town; the second, that they shall go to another cross-road in the opposite direction at the close of the day; and the third, that the custom must not be allowed to drop even for one year.

The "hobby" is a rude figure of a horse constructed of wood, gally decorated with colored ribbons in great profusion, and covered with drapery gaudily decorated with rings of many colors painted on the rough cloth. This framework is borne on the shoulders of a man, whose legs are hidden by the trappings. In the middle of the back of the horse is an aperture through which the man, wearing a hideous mask and curious head-dress thrusts his head. The tall of the horse is a rope "to which is spliced a cow's tall, which drags along behind, and in this fashion the man inside capers about the street, making ridiculous antics and occasionally swinging round the tail with considerable force to clear the way."

The perambulation is accompanied by much drumming by a man who carries an old-fashioned drum called a tabor, and of course, a collection is made from the passers-by.

A BIT OF OLD SAXON.

West Door, Trinity Church, Colchester, One of the Best Specimens.

One of the Best Specimens.

One of the few things left to link our own time with that distant past when England was divided into eight kingdoms is Saxon architecture. It is not very plentiful, for the Normans disdained its somewhat rude and primitive style, copied from the Roman buildings with which Caesar's conquering legions studded the country. So the first thing, they did was to pull down and rebuild the cathedrals and churches. Consequently most that we find now of Saxon architecture is a pillar here and an arch there amid the massive Norman walls of our ancient buildings, says Lloyd's Weekly.

Jambs of the doors, as seen in our sketch.

Trinity Church has been restored of late years, but this quaint doorway and many others of its ancient architectural features have been jealously preserved. The interior of the church, however, is not very striking, its principal point of interest being the tomb and monument of Dr. William of the comb and the author of a very curious work on the loadstone, in which he set forth a theory of magnetism that for years was accepted as correct. The date of the first building of Trinity Church is uncertain; all that is known is that the H. Foster Chaffee, Western Passenger Toronto.

Every woman may not be handsome, but every woman should keep with care the good points which nature has endowed her with. Sallow skin, dull eyes, a blotchy complexion—these no woman need have who pays proper attention to her health. Where constipation, liver derangement, blood impurities, and other irregularities exist, good complexion, bright eyes, and sprightly movements cannot exist. Internal derangements reveal themselves sooner or later on the movements cannot exist. Internal derangements reveal themselves sooner or later on the surface. Headache, dark rings around the eyes, sallow skin, labored heavy movements, a constant tired feeling—all these mean that the liver and digestive organs are needing help and correction. Bileans give this necessary help. They are purely vegetable and they work in Nature's own way. They do not merely flush the bowels and clear out the liver cells. They tone up liver and stomach to fulfil their proper functions. Not only so, but while more effective than the madisines hitherto obtainable, they are at the same time more mild in their operation. than the medicines hitherto obtainable, they are, at the same time, more mild in their operation,

THE HUMAN BRAIN.

Undergoes Wonderful Changes

The wonderful changes which the human brain undergoes from the moment when it first appears in the embryo until it becomes the perfected laboratory of thought characteristic to the ma-tured human being has been commented upon by several of the leading writers on biology, physiology, etc. During these successive changes, or, rather, transformations from the lower to the higher sphere, the human brain not only takes upon itself the general shape and form of the brains of various representatives of the lower classes of ani-mals, but appears to have the same structural constituents, at least to a certain degree. Thus it has been found that the original germ of the brain as it appears in the human embryo has the exact outlines of a serpent's thought factory. After that the changes which take place while the brain is assuming the various shapes which it must un-

What a multitude of women there are who feel that these words exactly suit their case. From early morn until late at night they have been on the go, year in and year out, attending to the daily household duties, looking after the wants of her children and spending the rest of her time attending to social and church work. Is it any wonder then that sooner or later there comes a general collapse? The action of the heart becomes weak and palpitating, the nerves become unstrung, the brain feels in a whirl half the time and the usual force of vitality is lacking.

It is at this time a woman should look after herself. If she does not, acrious female disorders may set in and often cause weary months and years of helplessness and asiserable suffering. What she wants is something to build up her system. For this purpose there is nothing to equal ing which it assumes in succession the form of the brain of a serpent, a fish, a bird, and lastly, before it assumes the characteristic human form, it takes upon itself the outline of a mammiferous quadruped's brain." Hence the remark made by scientific writers that "man is the sum total of all animals."

Grouchy chose the latter significance and, not believing it necessary to press forward, arrived too late. So much for the curl of a letter, a pen stroke or an ellegible swell to an "a."

This question was brought forward by the writing master of the elder Dumas.

"Remember, Alexandre," the master said to him, "the great defeat of the emperor was due only to his scrawling hand.
