

DARK, DREARY DAYS.
The weary days pass one by one
And furrow many a noble brow With lines of care—when all were fair Had love but kept his precious vow.
The duty now that leads them on To labor earnestly, and pray That sunless days through night shall raise
Them to a light where truth has sway.
The joys anticipated fade As did the rainbow when the storm Had wrecked the home and left alone A widowed heart and weary form.
Were all humanity to keep Their pledges, and assistance lend, Life would be sweet and we could meet Grim death with smiles, when comes the end.
—L. M. Wood in Albert, N. B. Maple Leaf.

A MOTHER'S INFLUENCE.
In a railroad car a man about sixty years old came in to sit beside me. He had heard me lecturing the evening before on temperance. "I am a master of of a ship," said he, "sailing out of New York, and have just returned from my fiftieth voyage across the Atlantic. About thirty years ago I was a sot, shipped while dead drunk, and was carried on board like a log. When I came to, the captain asked me, 'Do you remember your mother?' I told him she died before I could remember. 'Well,' said he,
'I am a Vermont man. When I was young I was crazy to go to sea. At last my mother consented I should seek my fortune. 'My boy,' she said, 'I don't know anything about towns, and I never saw the sea, but they tell me they make thousands of drunkards. Now, promise me you'll never touch a drop of liquor.' He said, 'I laid my hand in hers and promised, as I looked into her eyes for the last time. She died soon after. Frequently on every sea, seen the worst kind of life, and men. They laughed at me as a milk-sop, and wanted to know if I was a coward. But when they offered me liquor I saw my mother's pleading face, and I never drank a drop. It has been my sheet anchor; I owe all to that.
Would you like to take that pledge?' said he. My companion took it, and he added, 'It has saved me I have a fine ship, wife and children at home, and I have helped others.' That earnest mother saved two men to virtue and usefulness—how many more, He who sees all alone can tell.—Wendell Phillips.

HOW TO WALK.
If a man would appear like a gentle man, he must walk, stand and sit like one. In walking he should avoid all avoid everything that is unnatural or that smacks of self-consciousness. How oft do we see men in the street whose every movement tells us their minds are chiefly on themselves! One throws his chest to disson, while another walks with an abnormal stoop; but both delight in a kind of rolling, swaggering gait and an unnatural swing of the arms. We all know when we see such a man, no matter what his appearance in other respects, that he is a person of low breeding. Not only is a man's walk an index of his character and of the grade of his culture, but it is also an index of the frame of mind he is in. There is the thoughtful walk and the thoughtless walk, the responsible walk and the careless walk, the worker's walk and the idler's walk, the ingenious walk and the insidious walk, and so on. In a word, what there is in us we all carry in essentially the same way; hence the surest way to have gentility is to have gentility to carry.—Alfred Ayres in The Mentor.

—Experience proves that more people, though it must be admitted a different class, are attracted by a horse race, a sham battle, fireworks or a bull-fight, than to an exhibition of solid, substantial agricultural possibilities; but are country, district and State fairs to be run for the money they will not be grasping, catch-penny managers? We say, No. The general farmer should not attempt to compete with those who devote their whole time, money and attention to producing or trying to produce the fastest fliers. Heavy draft horses and good ordinary farm horses should be taught to walk faster before the plow and the grain wagon.

"You want to watch out for alligators very carefully at first," was the advice given a Northern invalid on his arrival in Florida, "but after you have been here a few weeks it won't so much matter."
"Why not?" was the question. "Why should I be more cautious at one time than another?" "Because," was the reply, "after you have been here a little while you will have grown too thick to be an object of interest to alligators.
They only want fresh arrivals."—Philadelphia Call.

The use of the editorial "we" prevails in the South, as will be seen by the following remark from a Tennessee paper:
"If we escape the hog-cholera this season there will be a large surplus of pork next winter."
