THE FARM

CHILLED MEAT TRADE.
(From The Farm.)

There never was a better time for Canada to get into the chilled meat trade than right now. The past season's trading has shown that good cattle can be produced in this country. The high quality of many of the cattle marketed at Toronto and elsewhere has been a surprise to the several big American firms who have entered the Canadian market the past season for the first time. The export market has been ac- tive, prices have ruled high, and the cat- tle raiser, who has had good cattle to sell, has made big money. This will stimulate others to get into the cat- tle-raising business. But the business can- not be extended on a large scale on an export trade in live cattle alone. There must be something in addition to steady the market. That something is a chilled meat trade established on a large enough scale to make it worth while. No part of the country would be benefited more than the West. What Dr. Rutherford had to say in last week's issue on this point has much force. Let some con- tagious disease break out in Canada, even in a very small way, and the ex- port trade in live cattle would receive a body blow. Immediately Canadian cattle would be shut out of Great Brit- ain altogether. While such a disaster may never come our way, yet it is well to be prepared. But this is not the only or chief reason for a chilled meat trade. It would steady the market and afford an outlet, more particularly for Western cattle, that would make beef raising in the West a profitable business. INCREASE THE SIZE OF THE DRAFT HORSE.

The showing made by Canadian-bred draft horses, at Guelph, indicates that out-breeders are getting the quality side of their business down to a science. What they should turn their attention to now is size. Keep up the quality, but get more size. If there is one fault more than another to be found with the average draft horse in Canada, it is that it is lacking in size. It is the big horse that tops the commercial horse market at the present time. If he has size and weight the buyer will overlook many other faults. But there is no reason why size and quality cannot be had in one and the same animal. The aim of Can- adian horsemen should be to secure both. They know the quality side of the busi- ness pretty well. Let them now get to work on increasing the size. It will pay. The demand for breeding stock will be increased and the draft horse, when sold in a commercial way, will bring more money. Add a couple more hundred pounds to the average Canadian draft horse and he cannot be beaten anywhere else in the world.

Lieut.-Gov. Gibson formally opened the new building of the Royal College of Dental Surgeons at the corner of Huron and College streets, Toronto, yester- day afternoon in the presence of a distinguished gathering of university professors, members of the dental and medical professions and friends of the college, among which were quite a number of ladies. His honor referred briefly to the superior class of practi- tioners of to-day compared to those of the early days of the college.

Mrs. H. Lyburner is away on a Christmas visit with her daughter, Mrs. Vannatter, of Ballinafad, Ont.

According to the Montreal Herald, there are 4,800 cases of typhoid fever in the city. The authorities estimate is about 2,200. There were 31 new cases reported in one hour yesterday morning, and the City Council to-morrow will be asked to vote $40,000 for a temporary hospital to accommodate patients.

THIS IS THE TIME OF YEAR WHEN ITS CUS- TOMARY TO GRAB HOLD OF THE HIGH RESOLVE, REFORM, TURN OVER A NEW LEAF, SWEAR OFF, AND THAT SORT OF THING, SO THAT'S JUST WHAT I'M GOING TO DO, RIGHT NOW. NOT!!

Three Good New Year's Resolutions

Christmas is over, and a new year is knocking at our doors?

You have untied the last red ribbon and said your happy thanks for the last belated gift.

I hope, my dear Miss Business Girl, as you look at the array of things which family and friends have given you that you'll take this thought to yourself and give it your most careful consideration. It is this:

Christmas brought you many gifts from others. What the new year gives you will depend on yourself.

Personally, I hope that the new year will bring you all better positions and more money—but even while I wish you this I know it is only a wish. It will only bring those most desirable things to the girls who have worked the hard- est and most conscientiously during the year, who have been neat in appearance and have not slighted their work; who have been pleasant and tactful even when it was natural to be exasperated and sharp; who have held their employ- ers' affairs to be a matter of trust and confidence not to be violated; and, last of all, who have been working toward something a little more than just the getting of so many dollars a week for the return of the things which claimed her attention between 9 and 5 of every week day.

Here's the point—what are you work- ing for?

What does your work bring you be- side your salary?

Are you developing into a kinder, sweeter, more capable woman, or are you becoming more and more of a creature who considers work a painful necessity for the time being—a sort of convenient raft to float you into matri- mony, as it were.

WHAT OF THE OLD YEAR?

Look back into the past year and ask yourself honestly what 1909 has done for you. Has it brought you greater fa- cility and pleasure in your work, or has it lowered you to the level of the drudge who works without interest or special intelligence? Has it broadened your sympathies and put you more into touch with the rest of the world, or has it made you hard and sour? On the an- swer to these questions depends your New Year's resolution for 1910.

In the first place, since you are a working woman, a little ego in the big machinery of the business world, make a good resolution about your work. Re- solve to work more intelligently.

Now, this first resolution must be carried out with discretion. I don't mean that you should break in and bother the head of the firm whenever you don't understand some detail of the business. But I do mean that you should make a note of the thing you don't understand, and at the most convenient moment get some light on it. Many times you can find out what you want to know by con- sulting the reference room of the near- est library. The librarians are always eager to help any one who is seriously looking for information.

If your work lies in any special direc- tion study up that subject. A girl who is employed by a firm who makes paint should read up on paints and meth- ods of making them, and school herself into an intelligent idea of just the kind of thing she, as an employee, is helping to put on the market.

KNOWLEDGE INCREASES YOUR VALUE.

The girl in the store who is employed in the silk counter should read up on the different weaves and become familiar with the output of the various silk mills in the country and abroad. A knowledge of dress and dyeing will help her, too, and this will lead her to the ever fascinat- ing study of color. She will be of ten times as much value to her firm than if she sells silk at so much a yard and regards it as nothing else than the day's work.

But you say that you do not see the use in all this—how it will not, in all probability, result in an increase of sal- ary to you. Perhaps not. But this it will do—it will train your mind to bigger things, and make a more intelligent girl of you. It will double your own interest in your work, and that is worth much to you. If you can by your own effort transform what you now consider drudg- ery into real interest to yourself, why you've done a miracle and practically made your life over.

If you are in a position where a for- eign language might be of use to you—begin the year with lessons in it. It will open up a whole new world.

Now, here is the next resolution. Re- solve to take care of your health.

It's all very well to go out at night to the theatre and to dances. It's all well to eat cream puffs and ice cream soda for lunch. You may be able to do it and not have your nerves and digestion give way. You may be able to wear low shoes in winter and yet not have pneu- monia. But it's safer to take no chances.

BLAME ON OWN SHOULDERS.

Too often the business girl who com- plains of how hard her work is creates the condition because she comes to the office or the shop or the factory tired out and nervous from lack of sleep and improper food. I certainly don't want to keep girls from eating candy and other sweets occasionally, but if they knew what a wonderful help it was to their bodies to eat only nourishing food, and chew it well and how much of a tonic and complexion beautifier it is to get a couple of hours sleep before mid- night every night I know that the most of them would have sense enough to ar- range their good times for reasonable hours, and to eat things which didn't make them uncomfortable for hours af- terward. I believe, too, that if girls realized how much of a drain on their vitality a bad cold is and how it pre- pares the system for all sorts of worse things there would be a boom in the sales of rain coats and storm rubbers.

And as a last word of this, Miss Busi- ness Girl, remember that it's a heap eas- ier to take care of your health and keep it in good condition than to rebuild it after it has once been destroyed.

Now just one more new year's resolu- tion. Resolve to be a more gracious woman.

Now, my definition of a gracious wom- an is a woman who is kind to every one without being sentimental and gush- ing; who has good manners, a gentle voice, and quiet ways; who never wounds the feelings of another, yet who is afraid to voice her convictions when the question is one of principle; who never violates a confidence—no, not even with the caution, "Now, don't you ever tell."

DEMAND FOR GRACIOUS WOMEN.

If there is any place in the world where gracious women are needed it is in business. It isn't always easy. Every girl in business must be on her guard against things which a woman at home never knows about or experiences. Most of all the business woman must be on her guard against herself lest she slide into lax modes of work, more careless dress, freer and less careful speech. No one can make herself over in a day. But by a little watching, by a little care, gentleness, and kindness may become a part of character just as easily as rudeness and harshness.

I know that these three resolutions are difficult, but I know also that they are not impossible to carry out if one has determination and strength of mind. Take the easiest one first of all by all means and see how it goes. For the most of us that would be to take care of the health.

The other resolutions, which are for the mind and the spirit, are no less im- portant. You need them, too, and you need them quite as much. I hope that when the end of 1910 is in sight you can look back and say that you have ac- complished something in all three; that you are stronger in body; that your work has gone brilliantly, and that your nature is more womanly.

Remember, you have but this one life to live. You cannot live in the future or the past. You have only to experi- ence one day at a time, and each day should bring you something of value. It cannot do this unless you make it so.

Don't be dismayed by the solemnity of that last paragraph. Miss Business Girl. You're the salt of the earth, my dear, and I wish you a wonderful and happy New Year.

Faithfully yours,
Alice Mason.

THE EARTH'S ENVELOPE.

Three Distinct Layers of Air—Cold and Gales of High Altitudes.

The new science of the air is the re- sult of many hundred kite and sounding balloon flights made by day and by night in fair weather and foul, over land and sea, at all seasons of the year and from the equator to the Arctic Circle. Most people know that the warm air surrounding the earth is only a thin belt, but few know most of us know that at ten miles above the earth it would appear quite different.

The air is stratified in three more or less distinct layers. In the lowest we live. It extends about two miles and is a region of turmoil, whirling winds, cyclones and anti-cyclones. At two miles the freezing point is reached, and then there is a second stratum extending up- ward for about another six miles. Here the air grows steadily colder and drier, the lowest temperature recorded being 167 degrees below freezing point. Here the air moves in great planetary swirls produced by the spinning of the earth on its axis, so that the wind always blows in the same easterly direction.

The greater the height the more fur- ious is the blast of this relentless gale. After this layer comes the third or isothermal stratum, discovered almost simultaneously by M. de Bort and Dr. Assmann. This is called the permanent inversion stratum, because the tempera- ture increases with the height reached. But the temperatures so far recorded in the second stratum are not high, being far below zero Fahrenheit, generally somewhere from 122 degrees to 140 de- grees below it.

Here the air no longer swirls in a planetary circles. The wind may blow in a direction contrary to that in the second layer. And the air invariably is excessively dry. Where this third stratum ends no one knows. But it must be at more than eighteen miles above the earth. For sounding balloons have reached this height and have not found the end of the permanent inversion layer of air. When the influence of the upper re- gions of air upon the lower is fully un- derstood it may be possible to foretell the weather not merely for a day but for a week.—From the Chicago Tribune.

Over a hundred applications have been received at the Marine Department's positions in the proposed Canadian navy. Included in the number are applications from several men who have served in the British navy and are now on the reserve.
