On Whispering.

By RUTH CAMERON.

A woman in our neighborhood has just lost a good maid through whispering.

The Maid Left Because Her Employer Whispered.

This is how it happened. If any little thing in the food or service was wrong, the woman would comment upon it to her family in a whisper. The maid would frequently be conscious of the whispering and of course thought the criticisms much worse than they really were. Sometimes the whippers were not criticisms at all, but merely mentions of family matters that the mistress did not wish her helper to hear. But the maid did not know that. And when one is given such an opportunity to use one's imagination one usually uses it to good, or rather bad effect.

Eventually the maid left simply because of these whippers.

The mistress feels aggrieved because of her loss, says she treated her maid well and seldom criticised her, though there were plenty of things she didn't like.

Open Criticism Would Have Been Kinder.

If she only had criticised her openly she would have been kinder.

Women are queer that way. Many good women can't seem to treat their maids fairly and squarely. A man said to me the other day: "I don't wonder women have such a hard time to keep their maids. They don't seem to be able to treat them in a business-like way. There's my wife, she's a kind, intelligent woman; but when I see the way she nags her maids, fusses at them and interferes with them, well—picks on them—is really the best way to express it—I wonder she keeps them as long as she does. My clerks wouldn't stay a week if I treated them that way."

How Whispering Sent a Fever Up.

To return to the main road, whispering within the hearing of a sick person is something that has been condemned a thousand times, apparently quite in vain. Just the other day I heard of a woman who was made much sicker by hearing her daughter whispering to the doctor in the hall. The doctor's responses to the whispering were reassuring, but it was impossible to convince the invalid that something wasn't being concealed from her. She was depressed, she was nervous, and consequently she was suspicious, and by brooding over her suspicions, fretted herself into a high fever.

A whisper is a sign-board—"This is something we don't want you to hear." When the sign-board is put up it instantly arouses the most dormant curiosity. And, as I said before, an imagination thus stimulated is apt to construct something much worse than the actual truth.

Never whisper unless you want to hurt people's feelings, embarrass them, arouse their curiosity and defeat your own purpose of keeping the thing quiet.

The puffed hip draperies appear on many of the new skirts.

Cabbages.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Stewash."

The cabbage is a lonely and humble vegetable, which grows fruitfully and can be raised by a mere amateur without the use of agricultural reports or imported soil. It consists of a long, thick root, which is used as a lunch club by cut-worms and a head which carries in size from 5 1/2 to 8 1/2. Contrary to conditions in other heads, the more swelled the cabbage head becomes and the softer it is in the middle, the more useful it is to the human race.

Cabbages are raised by sowing a quantity of seed in a moist, warm place. When the infant cabbage has amassed a couple of leaves, it is taken out of the nursery and planted in the garden. One man can successfully bring up 100 cabbages in his spare moments. The plant grows slowly and when it reaches maturity, can be harvested by a quick jerk. It is then ready to be transformed into food.

To prepare a cabbage for the table in the most successful manner, first leave a forty-acre farm a little distance from town. Then set a cook-stove in the middle of the field and turn the wind gently away from the town. Select a cabbage with good frontal development, and place it in a kettle of water. Then light the fire and retire swiftly. At the end of two hours, eat a small piece of two-horse power cheese, in order to neutralize the atmosphere around the cook-stove, and remove the cabbage. Wring the small out of it, season to taste and devour it. You will find it delicious. While being cooked, the cabbage defends itself much as does the celebrated pole-cat, but when it is finally overcome, it is sweet and toothsome. In the fall, a fine dish can be made by chopping a hundred heads of cabbage into shoe-strings, and burying the whole in a barrel. During the winter, batches of this preparation can be fired from time to time in a skillet and the result is that sublime delicacy known as "sauerkraut." It is not necessary to advertise to the neighbourhood that you are going to have kraut for dinner.

The cabbage head is a great lesson to man. It does not swear, nor boast, nor stuff itself full of unsavory facts. There has been some talk of substituting cabbage heads in many department positions in Washington on the theory that they could do the work perfectly and could be eaten in their old age, instead of pensioned. But nothing has come of this as yet. Reforms move wondrous slowly in this country.

Lord Inchcape's Views at Banking Meeting.

London, Jan. 28.—At the annual meetings of eight important banks today the financial situation was reviewed by the nation's leading authorities. All were optimistic, but all emphasized the necessity of economy, both public and private.

Of the various views Lord Inchcape's carry the most weight, for he is a commercial as well as a financial authority, being a great shipowner, head of the Peninsular and Oriental and other lines, an insurance director and a director of the Suez Canal.

He said Germany is already beaten, irrevocably, and she knows it. Her losses in men and material are stupendous. She is eating herself up, blinding away her resources and men of irreplaceable value.

"Our present taxation is now bringing 400,000,000 pounds sterling annually. We will probably have to provide another 200,000,000 annually by taxes or a reduction of private and public extravagance."

The standard of living must go down. The nation must work harder and spend less."

Try this! Hair gets thick, glossy, wavy and beautiful at once.

Immediate?—Yes! Certain?—That's the joy of it. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a Dandierine hair cleanse. Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Dandierine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or excessive oil, and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair. A delightful surprise awaits those whose hair has been neglected or is scraggly, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Dandierine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair, and lots of it surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Dandierine from any drug store or toilet counter and just try it.

Wedding Bells.

On Saturday afternoon last a very pretty wedding took place at St. Mary's Church, Southside. The contracting parties were Miss Awmack, of Harrogate, England, and Mr. Crawford, R. N. R. The bride, who was given away by Dr. Duncan, looked charming attired in a confection of white silk tulle and with a veil. Miss Ruth Duncan who filled the duties of bridesmaid was pleasingly dressed in pale blue mousseline-de-soie. Mr. R. C. Quick was best man, whilst the Rev. H. Uphill officiated. Many guests were present at the happy ceremony including Hon. John Anderson, Mrs. Duncan and the Misses Duncan, Miss Field and Mrs. Uphill. A reception was held at the residence of Dr. Duncan where the health of the bride and groom was proposed by Mr. Anderson and replied to by the groom. The Telegram wishes Mr. and Mrs. Crawford many years of uninterrupted bliss.

Your Boys and Girls.

The baby needs plenty of cool, unsweetened water to drink. It is safe to boil all the drinking water for a baby, and it should be given to the very young lukewarm, not cold. Never put sugar or anything else in it, and offer it to baby between feedings. A constantly active baby requires a great deal of water, especially those who are cutting teeth.

It is a most important thing that all baby's clothes should be well aired the day before he wears them, but they should not be put on warm from the fire. It is well, where it can be done, to let him have clean clothes every day, but if this cannot be arranged, his clothes should be well aired every night so as to be free from perspiration and ready to put on again in the morning.
