

Would any man or woman in this city refuse to give some small help to a little orphan child who has neither father or mother to provide for him? Not One!

On SUNDAY NEXT the unselfish Sisters of Belvidere Orphanage are asking the Catholic people of St. John's to help a little in the upkeep of who must have food to eat and clothes to wear—the bare necessities of life. But a few close friends of the Institution who know of the reticence of those good ladies and their dislike of publicity, have jointly arranged to extend this appeal to no matter what class or creed, who would deem it a pleasure to do something for those helpless little orphans!

All Charitably Disposed Citizens

Could any father or mother, remembering the sheltering care given to their own dear ones, refuse to give an extra dollar to the upkeep of these little ones?

If he who "gives to the poor, lends to the Lord," won't you fathers and mothers who love your own dear little tots, please remember kindly the BELVIDERE ORPHANS on Sunday next.

Please Give Them All That You Can Spare!

THE PRAYER OF LISPING LITTLE LIPS WILL BE YOUR REWARD.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

FROM ASSURED PREJUDICES.

The lady next door, whose husband is in a business which makes it necessary for her to do a great deal of entertaining, was much upset the other day because the children had the measles and she would not be able to entertain important persons who were to town. "Will it be so unfortunate. He is so great stress on entertaining in his own home, you know, and this man who is the most important of all will have to go to the and I don't believe we can get good accommodations for him." "Surely," I said, "he will understand how it is and not blame you.

Judges are queer things and often rest on perfectly absurd and perfectly illogical bases.

Here is an experience which particularly impressed that fact upon me.

A Favourite Indoor Sport of Auto Owners.

We were engaged in a discussion the other day of the kind of a car we should buy next. That is the indoor sports in which all auto owners (even if they haven't money enough to maintain their present car) can always indulge.

The name of a certain car was mentioned. "I've never liked that," I said. "Why," asked its champion. I couldn't say. I really knew nothing about it, had not even ridden in one. I had to dig down in my subconscious mind before I found the reason and what do you suppose it was? The car had the same name as a man whom I do not think highly of.

Isn't that ridiculous? But I do not think such slender basis for prejudice is uncommon.

One of Them Make Was a Hideous Color.

While we talked of cars I traced my prejudice against two others and found that in one make I had had a most unhappy trip (not the fault of the car but of extraneous circum-

THE QUIET LIFE.

When village clocks are striking nine, I to my room repair, and on my downy couch recline, and throw some nightmares there.

And people say, "You miss so much, who sleep the hours away! You should wake up and keep in touch with night life, which is gay! There all the live wires are on deck and hands play jassy tunes, and you should through the village trek, and blow in some doubtless." The lights are glaring, white and red, throughout the noisy night, but I have parked myself in bed and there I'm sleeping tight. And in the morning when I read the night-life tales of crime, I say, "A man must sleep, indeed, to have a high class time. Bill Jimson had his pockets picked while looking at a game, and Jasper Jinks was badly licked for smiling at a dame. I see that Boggs, whose car's a treat, it has such wondrous power, was pinched while coming down the street at forty miles an hour. And Mike was knifed and Pete was shot by gangsters, it is said; why should a man through dangers trot when he can sleep in bed. By night all perils are loosed, and evil runs amok; same is the night who goes to rook, when curfew's hour has struck."

A Clever Piece of Thieving.

On September 24, 1916, a man called at the office of a well-known ship-owner of Marseilles, whom he had casually met at a cafe a few days before, and told him that he knew of some jewels worth, at least six thousand pounds which were to be sold for £600. The shipowner mentioned the matter to M. Giraud, a jeweller, and the two agreed to find the money, and share the profits. M. Giraud then went to see a man named Roland, who was said to have the jewels, and who was staying at the Hotel des Alpes. Roland showed him the gems, and after handing over the £680, M. Giraud placed them in his pocket. At that moment two men entered the room, declared themselves detectives, took the jewels from Giraud, and arrested him and Roland. They were taken to the Palace of Justice, where Giraud was told to wait on a bench by which a gendarme was standing; the other man having charge of Roland outside. After waiting some time on the bench, Giraud asked the gendarme when the detective was coming back, and when he was to appear before the magistrate. The gendarme replied that the man who had left him sitting there had merely asked him the nearest way out; then Giraud realized that he had been robbed of £680. On inquiries being made at the Hotel des Alpes, it was found that Roland had only taken the rooms a few hours before M. Giraud had called upon him, and neither he nor the two "detectives" were ever found.
