"If no other means is offered, Dr. Sheef, I shall ask you to let me take the car. I shall ask you to let me take the car. I am perfectly capable of driving. I have driven it in the country for two seasons. All I ask is that some one be directed to go with me to the station. No. Better than that, if there is someone here who is willing to accompany me to the city, he shall be handsomely paid for going. It is but little more than thirty miles. I refuse to spend the night in this house. That is final."

They drew apart to confer, leaving her leaving her leaving the permitted to modify his rather crude estimate of her. It is difficult to underestand, much less to describe a nature like hers. Fine-minded, gently bred woman who can through an ordeal such as she experiencel without breaking under the strain are rare indeed. They must be wonderful. It is hard to imagine a more heart-breaking crisis in life than the one which confronted her on this dreadful night, and yet she had faced it with a fortitude that seems almost unholy.

ing your absence abroad? When did you last see him alive?"

She did not reply for many seconds, and then it was with a perceptible effort.

Somehow, she envied the woman to whom that hand belonged. It had been her divine right to kill, and yet another took it from her.

"I see," said the coroner gently.

He opened the door for her and she passed out. A number of men were grouped about the throbbing motor-car. They fell away as she approached, silently fading into the shadows like so many vast, unwholesome ghosts. The sheriff and Drake came forward.

"This man will go with you madam." said the sheriff, pointing to an unsteady figure beside the machine. "He is the only one who will undertake it. They're all played out, you see. He has been drinking, but only on account of the hardships he has undergone tonight. You will be quite safe with Morley."

No snow was falling, but a bleak wind blew meanly. The air was free from particles of sleet; wetly the fall of the night clung to the earth where it had fallen.

Once, in the course of her bitter reflective.

Once, in the course of her bitter reflections, she spoke aloud in a shrill, tense voice, forgetful of the presence of the man beside her:

voluntarily she glanced upward. The curtains in an upstairs window were blowing inward and a dim light shone out upon the roof of the porch. She shuddered and then climbed up to the seat and took her place at the wheel.

A few moments later, the three men standing in the middle of the road watched the car as it rushed away.

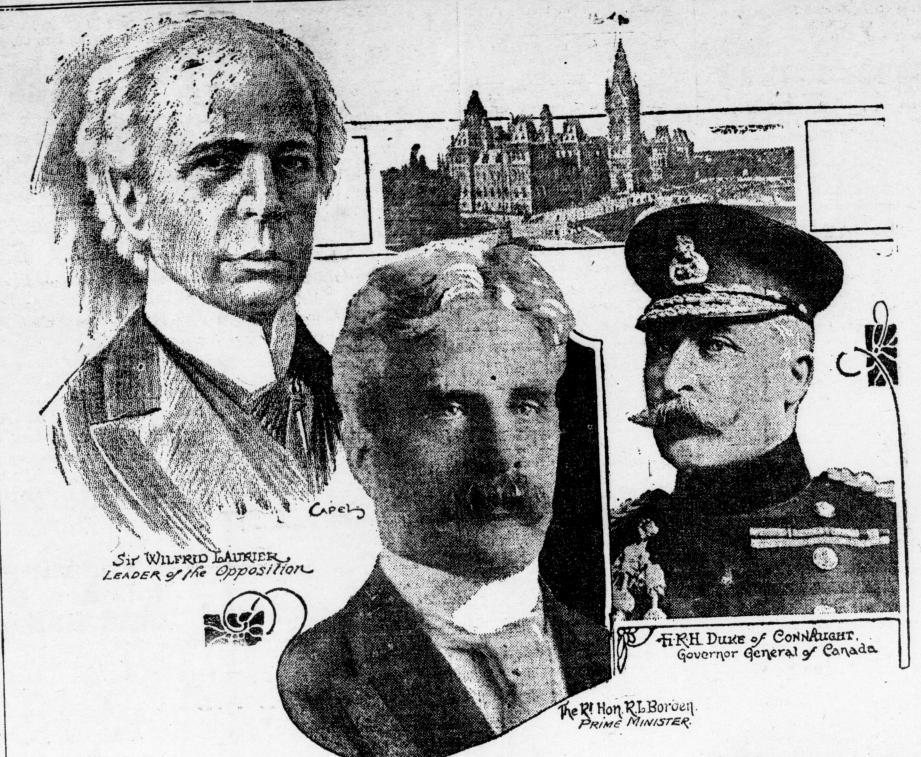

"By George, she's a worder!" said the sheriff.

Chicken Thief Lost Purse With $92.00 In It

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Guelph, Jan. 15 .- At Kossuth, a German settlement about eight miles from this city, a chicken thief has lately been very busy. One night recently he pried open the door of a coop and made off with twenty fine birds.

The woman of the house, whose special pride the chickens were, was bemoaning the fate of her beauties on the morning after the robbery.

While making search for tracks, she was surprised to find a purse lying in the snow, which the marauder had evidently lost.

Picking it up, she was still further surprised to find that it contained no less than $92. She has forgotten all about the loss of her twenty feathered

New York, Jan. 15 .- The murder of van Martysewicz, whose body crammed in a trunk was left in the street by two pushcart men on Dec. 29, was described today by Stefana Kiviatkowska, a young Polish woman, one of the six persons under arrest connection with the crime. She said that two of the men now in prison killed Martysewicz with a drink of poisoned beer, in a house where she was an inmate, where they lured him, with a promise of work as a stable helper. The motive was robbery, she weeks later the Government shows no said, but all the murderers obtained was a cheap watch and $2 in money.

Toronto, Jan. 15 .- "The militia force of Canada is itself so apparently satisfled with its efficiency, and the public is so immersed in business as to be almost totally unconcerned with the question of Canadian defence. We are exposed on all sides. Unless our policy of drift is soon ended the certain end is irreparable loss," stated General Otter, addressing the Empire Club this afternoon.

General Otter quoted statistics to show that the Canadian militia as composed is ill-equipper. "What is the remedy? I venture to suggest that it must be compulsory training in the schools, and in the universities." EMPEROR INTERVENES

If you were told of a new discovery for the treatment of coughs, colds and bronchitis, as certain in its action on all chest troubles as anti-toxin is on diphtheria, or vaccination on small-pox, wouldn't you feel like giving it a trial? Especially if you could try it for fifty cents !

Peps is the discovery! Peps are little tablets, neatly wrap-ped in air and germ-proof silver foil. They contain certain medicinal ingredients, which, when placed upon the tongue, immediately turn into vapour, and are at once breathed down the air passages to the lungs. On their journey, they soothe the inflamed and irritated membranes of the bronchial tubes, the delicate walls of the air passages, and finally enter and carry relief and healing to the capillaries and tiny air sacs in the
