BRANTFORD GIVES KING BIG WELCOME

Four Thousand People Acclaim Premier at Meeting in Interest of Raymond.

Special to The Advertiser by a Staff Reporter.

Brantford, Oct. 21.—The great industrial center of Brantford gave Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, prime minister of Canada, a mighty reception tonight. He was cheered for several minutes by the audience of 4,000, which crowded the armories, both before and after his address. W. G. Raymond, Liberal member for Brantford in the last parliament, now recognized as one of the greatest parliamentarians who has sat in the commons in recent years, was also given a tremendous reception. Other speakers tonight were J. C. Elliott, Liberal candidate in West Middlesex, and president of the Liberal association, and George Scarfe, M.P. Mr. King compared the Brantford of today with the Brantford of four years ago, when 2,000 men were idle, unemployed and that in a city which the Tories said the Liberals would ruin by a few changes in the tariff. Mr. King replied again to Mr. Meighen's criticism of his action regarding the Grand Trunk employees' pensions.

Mr. King is leaving tonight for Toronto and North York, and it is unlikely that he will address any more meetings in Western Ontario. Mr. Scarfe, president of the Brantford Liberal association, presided. Mr. Scarfe said everyone knew the change in conditions from years ago and now. Brantford had suffered because customers could not buy its machinery goods. Now the farmers, who were the big customers, were able to make purchases, and consequently industries were getting much more business. Mr. Scarfe read a list of prominent manufacturers who were Liberal candidates. "These men are from varied industries," he continued. "They are not offering themselves as Liberal candidates unless they think the Liberal policy will be beneficial to them."

Mr. Scarfe paid a tribute to W. S. Raymond, Brantford's Liberal member in the last parliament. Mr. Raymond said the meeting was a credit to Brantford. When Meighen spoke here in the last campaign there were 4,000 or 5,000 idle men here and we were raising funds to keep people from starving. Today what a difference. The factories are working, many of them overtime, and we have fewer than 100 unemployed men now. "I hope that none who voted for me last time will not have to change their minds. I have stood four square for Brantford's interests in committee and on the floor of the house. I don't know anything I left undone. I was never a sluggard in your business."

Mr. Raymond said he was being attacked personally by Conservative speakers. "I can love my opponents, but hate their principles like the devil," Mr. Raymond says he follows Mr. Meighen, but which Mr. Meighen—there are two Mr. Meighens. The one Mr. Meighen was in favor of reduction on agricultural implements. The other Mr. Meighen who would put a tariff on coal which is used by our factories? "In the four years I sat in parliament the Tories never made a motion for higher tariff until Mr. Meighen in the last session moved a motion for protection. The tariff has never been raised since Sir John Macdonald's day. It proves the Tories are not in earnest; their attitude is humbug, snare, fraud and delusion. "Mr. Meighen is not the leader of his whole party. He leads a section of it. Do the Conservatives carry dates know what load they are carrying and the wartime elections which should damn any party as long as it is remembered. The Conservatives must acknowledge these things."

Kind Parliament Needs. J. C. Elliott, K.C., Liberal candidate for West Middlesex, paid a tribute to Mr. Raymond, stating that if there was one man who was Brantford's Liberal member, "Men like Mr. Raymond make the parliament ought to be. "Of all the governments any dominion has had there never has been a government which surpasses the record of this government. There hasn't been a single charge against the government, and that is a supreme test. "The first principle realized by Mr. King," said Mr. Elliott, "was that the farmers must be prosperous before they could buy the products of the factories." He also realized that there must be greater markets for Canadian farm products. Mr. Elliott thought a change in government now would injure the country.

Premier King Speaks. The premier said he was pleased to be in Brantford for two reasons. The first was because he had spoken in Brantford previous to the last election, and had stated then that no Brantford industry would suffer from actions of the Liberal government. "I want also to ask you on behalf of the people of Canada to send back the men who have been re-elected for the last four years. I ask one to the hall of parliament, one who has not been surpassed by any who have sat in legislative bodies in Canada. He is for all that makes for all that is noblest and best; no one ever gained the respect and honor of fellow-members as your member has. He asked Brantford to return him again as an ornament to parliament, to Canada, and to the British empire."

The premier paid a tribute to Mr. Raymond for looking after this riding and its people. His speeches would be read long after others had passed into oblivion. Found Way Out. Mr. King reminded the audience that Brantford, with other Canadian cities, was experiencing a depression in 1921. The Liberals felt that the way out was a development of the four basic industries, their helping those of secondary nature. The government had started on this principle. He had said in Brantford then that the government would be obliged to reduce duties on certain implements of production and the necessities of life. "But before we altered a single duty we consulted with these manufacturers which had been held. They had asked that duties on some of the raw material be taken off and also the sales tax. The government followed the advice. The premier said Mr. Raymond came to him and said the proposed tariff cuts would hurt Brantford, and that he would have to vote against it. "He did vote against it, and I said I thought he would find he was wrong. I think I was right, and that the action was of benefit to the industries and the men in them. Our aim is to help industry, not to injure it."

Asks For Lists. Mr. King shattered all talk of all free trade. "We must have a tariff to get money to run the country. If there were not a tariff we would have to resort to direct taxation. That is a guarantee that there will always be a tariff. We think the best way to work that out is through an advisory tariff board." Mr. King again challenged Mr. Meighen to give the names of the 2,000 factories which he alleged were closed up. "He can't do it," said the premier. The premier contended that thousands of dollars and thousands of people were prevented from coming here because of the blue-ribbon cry. "That is one reason for appealing to the people just now. After Oct. 29 and we are in power with a majority, we won't hear a word of this depressing talk. We must get rid of it now," said Mr. King. "We are appealing to the people for a chance with a good working majority."

Policy Has Age Only. "Mr. Meighen offers you a policy 45 years old, and that is all it is," continued the prime minister. "Where were the advocates of high protection in parliament during the last four years? They did not even propose a resolution calling for it until June of this year." The premier asked who were going to form the Conservative government if the Tories were elected. The name of Mr. Guthrie was met with cheers. Then the premier named General Newbould and Dr. Manion. "They were all Liberals," he added, which was received with counter-cheers. "Isn't it time the Conservative party got men who were Conservatives all the time?" "What about Patenaude?" queried one of the audience. "Mr. Patenaude says he will have no more to do with Mr. Meighen than he will have with me, and thank heaven he will have nothing to do with me," said Mr. King, who advised the Conservatives to get some real Conservatives in their party. Mr. King was asked if it was true that the Massey-Harris Company was building a branch in France because that country had raised its tariff against agricultural machines. "My friend, the Massey-Harris is selling more machinery in France now than it ever did because of the treaty this government arranged with France," replied the premier, amid the applause of the audience.

CHAPLIN REFUSES JOINT DISCUSSION. Conservative Fails To Accept Kent Liberals' Terms To Debate Election Issues. Special to The Advertiser. Chatham, Oct. 21.—Prospects of a joint debate on election issues faded today when the Chaplin forces failed to write the Kent Liberal association agreeing to the terms by which the proposed meeting in the armories tomorrow night would be governed. J. W. Rutherford, the Liberal candidate, and his able platform supporter, Senator A. B. McColg, were prepared to meet A. D. Chaplin, Conservative agent, Mr. Bedford, his public agent. Liberal workers are keenly disappointed over the refusal, and to give them another chance to debate the questions of the day. Dr. Rutherford and Senator McColg have offered to turn a proposed Liberal rally here next Tuesday night in the Armories into a joint meeting if Mr. Chaplin and Mr. Bedford desire it.
