ful opponent to Sir Charles Tupper." Thus we see "honors are divided." Very much to the point were the remarks of the Marquis of Salisbury. There is talk of faceal union, there is talk of military union. Both of them, to a cer-tain extent may be good things. Perhaps we may not be able to carry them so far as some of us think. But, in any case, they will not be the basis on which Empire will rest. Our Empire will rest upon the growth of sympathy, and common thought and feel-ing between those who are in the main the children of a common race and who have a common history to look back upon and a common future to look forward to. It is the trumpet of the moral idea in the con-struction of the great political organization which is the object of the effort in which we have joined, and of which our meeting to-gether here is the symbol and the seal." THE REGAL CITY. At the dinner, designated by some the festival of the Empire, which occurred at the Imperial Institute just now, the Prince of Wales presided. There was present, of course, a bright and happy and representa-tive contingent of colonial statesmen, among whom Premier Laurier was conspicuous. The President very pleasantly referred to his visit to Canada, on which occasion so many of us had our first look at Royalty. Evidently, though Sir Charles Tupper has been beaten into the cold shades, he is not forgotten over here.
