Letter from Miss Wintemute.

KOFU, April 15th, 1890.

As I take up my pen to write, it really seems as though my lips were sealed and I could not say a word. Before this reaches you, you will have heard the terrible news of Mr. Large's murder by robbers during the night of 4th and 5th of April. As the papers and the letters from Tokyo will give you full accounts of everything, it is not necessary for me to write also; but the memory of the tragedy still hangs over us like a shadow, and whenever no immediate duty claims our attention, our thoughts continually return to all that has happened; so that, as I take up my pen, I feel I cannot write about it, and at the same time I cannot but write about it.

On Saturday, the 5th, a telegram came to us. On opening it, we read, "Mr. Large killed last night by robbers. Mrs. Large ill. All come immediately." We could not believe it, and telegraphed back, to be sure there was no mistake. At first we were in a dilemma. Miss Lund had her travelling passport, but Miss Preston and I had none. On inquiry, however, we found they would give us special ones that night; so, while waiting for an answer to the telegram,
