What wots it that we pray to Christ Each fro a different shrine? Your faith is rooted in your creed, Your rath is rooted in your creed,
And I believe in mine.
Why should we wrangle o'er the claims
Of doctrining schools,
While England chuckles at our shame, And Europe calls us fools ?

Your fathers died on Antrim's hills
To make the Island free,
Some of our sires were ruthless foes

Of Irish liberty;
Of Irish liberty;
Both had their faults or virtues bright,
No matter what their creed; A noble heart's the only hand To shape a noble deed.

The selfsame sunlight fires our viens, The selfsame sunight fires our viens,
Neath God's same sky we toil;
We struggle 'gainst the selfsame lords,
And till the selfsame soil.
Then, brother, let the old feuds pass
From that brave heart of thine— The Orange li'y be thy crest,
A Shaurock sprig be mine.

IRISH NOTES.

The long drought was broken in Ireland on July 4, when rain fell in several parts of the country to the great advantage of the crops.

The Assize reports disclose an almost complete immunity from crime in Ireland. And yet it was on the prevalence of crime in that country that the Tories based their Coercion

Among the deputations of English adies who recently presented an address of sympathy to the women of Ireland were Miss Cobden, Mrs. John Mills and Mrs. W. Bright McLaren.

The Chief Secretary has introduced into the House of Common, a bill for the better administration of the acts relating to the relief of the destitute poor in certain parts of Ireland. Father O'Byrne, formerly of Cork, but now of Northern Queens and, is visiting his native land. He was the bearer to Mr. Bigger of a rourd aum in money from the Irihmen of Northern Queensland, who promise a handsome yearly subscription if it be needful.

It was only a few years since Mr. Healy, M.P., was black-beaned when a candidate for admission to the Law Students' Society; to day the principal places of leadership and honor are the principal places of leadership and honor are triumphantly voted to the candidates of Nationalist views. Mr. J. H. Gallagher, B.L., a gallant young Ceit from faithful Donegal, has been voted to the Auditorial chair, while Mr. M. D. Wyer has completely vanquished his three differences of the transverse. Tory opponent in the contest for the treasurer

In a letter to a Cork friend, a London Liberal Unionist of mu h social influence says:—"I will content myself with saying that I believe public opinion is veering Home Rule wards, and many of us are asking ourselves why we should hesitate to give graciously that which we all feel must inevitably be accorded in the immediate future, spite of present prejudice and opposition.'

In a letter to the London Press, a recent English tourist, Mr. Henry King-Parks, com-plains of the taxation of the scenery of Killarney by the imposition of tolls for viewing Muckross demesne and Lord Kenmare's Park. As the Earl of Kenmare and Mr. Herbert own all the tourist ground about Killarney, and levy tolls of sixpence and a shilling, their yearly incomes from this score, it is calculated, must be considerable. The tells amount in the aggregate to 4s Gd for each person.

The Irish Tory members do not any lorger on the land question try to conceal their bitterness towards the Government for having so completely deserted them. After Mr. Balfour's speech, on July 21st, one of them in the course of conversation with a Northern member of the Nationalis: party, said:—"The Government has thrown us over at last. I wish to God I had joined your party long ago. I fear there is nothing left for us to do but to become Home

In answer to Dr. Tanner, Colonel King Harman, in the House of Commons, has admitted that nearly £32,000 of the £35,000, the total amount of the dog tax in Ireland last year, was spent in the cost of collection and in increases of salary to petty sessions clerks.

A Parliamentary return, granted on the motion of Pierce Mahony, has been circulated. It gives the gross rateable valuation, the total population, and the rateable valuation per head of the population in each electoral division in It also gives the average from rate and county cess, in each district for the last five years. It brings out pre-eminently the enor-mous difference between the circumstances of mous difference between the circumstances of the population in the various parts of Ireland. Thus in Bodenstown, county Kildare, the average valuation is £1778 per head of the population, while in the Island of Achill is is only 5s. 4d. The land in Bodenstown is valued at £1 12s. 1d. per acre, and on the average there are somewhat over 10 acres of land for each head of the population; but in Achill, where the land is only valued at is, an acre, there is only a fraction valued at 1s. an acre, there is only a fraction over five acres for each head of the population.

In 20 electoral divisions in the county Meath the land is valued at more than 18s. per acre. and the population is one person for every 10 acres, the valuation per head being over £9. In 60 electoral divisions of the county Mayo the valuation per head is under £4, and in eight of these it is under 10s., yet in 54 of these divisions there are less than 10 acres of land to each head of the population, showing that the population is actually thicker in the popurar districts of Mayo then and the population is one person for every 10 thicker in the poorer districts of Mayo than in the richest districts of Meath, and this in the face of the fact that thousands of acres o mountain land in Mayo, which are uninhabited, are included in the calculations. This clearly shows the correctness of the contention that the result of the land system in Ireland has been to drive the population off the good land which was capable of supporting them, and to leave them on the bad land which cannot yield them a decent living.

A ganger working for a small wage on a railway in County Kilkenny, has, by a decision just given by the Irish Court of Appeal, come into a property known by the strange title of Mountmisery Estate, with £20,000. The late owner, Mr. Thomas Hayden, left a will be written and the country of the remaining the strange of the stra questing £18,000 to any niece or, other female relative who should marry a man of the name of Hayden living in the County Nipperary and born and reared a Roman Catholia Subject to born and reared a Roman Catholic Subject to this the property was left to a person named Fleming for life; but by the decision of the court, who held, that the bequest was void be cause of remoteness, the railway gauser, as next of kin, succeeds to the whole property.

SUMMER BEVERAGES.

FEW SIMPLE RECIPES FOR WHOLESOME AND THIRST-QUENCHING DRINKS. The feverish thirst of summer days is almost inquenchable when the liquid we take to relieve it is unaccompanied by nourishment, for example a cup of tea and very little bread and butter or cracker will do more to allay thirst than three or four cups without.

For this reason the egg lemonade that has For this reason the egg lemonade that has been such an attraction at the soda fountain this summer is one of the best beverages ever introduced, as well as the most delicious. Many declare that it is not so good when home-made, and they are generally right. This is the reason: The powerful pressure brought to bear on the lemon while in the squeezing machine forces out the oil from the peel as well as the juice, and this is not done with the ordinary hand squeeze. The juice of lemon has little fragrance; it is the oil that imparts the delicious flavor to it. Make the drink in the following way and it will be quite equal to that made by prefessionals: made by prefessionals:

EGG LEMONADE.

Break an egg into a tumbler, rub two lumps of stear on the ricd of a fine lemon, put the sugar into the tumbler, squeeze the lemon into it with a squeezer and half fill with ice broken small; fill up with water and with a shaker shake the whole vicorously a few seconds; then grate a little nutmeg over the top. If you have no shaker, beat the egg with a fork.

Simple lemonade is greatly improved by rubbing the peel with sugar. When made for patients recovering from fever a far more grateful drink than strong lemonade is made by using one lemon to a quart of water, with one lump of sugar rubbed on the peel; sweeten very little. little. This, given in teaspoonfuls when the mouth and tongue are parched, is inexpressibly

COLD WATER TEA OR RUSSIAN TEA Russian summer tea is usually made by steeping tea in boiling water in the usual way and setting it in ice. This gives the stringency that is pleasant when hot, with cream, but to many tastes very unpleasant when cold. The better way to make it is in hot weather, and so made, iced tea is a positive luxury. Four hours before you require the tea for use (or over night if you choose) put four tesspoonfuls of tea into a pitcher, pour on it a quart of cold water, cover and set it in the ice box. It does not sound as if good tea could be made with cold water, but this is the perfection of cold tea, fragrant without the least bitterness, and of a beautiful amber clearness. Sweeten as any other tea. With a little lamon juce and a slice of lamon floating in each glass this makes the fashionable "Russian tea."

EFFERVESCENT SODA WATER AT HOME.

"One may long for a glass of sods or be delighted to offer it to our heated and weary friends, but it is quite too much to go to the druggist for it with the sun high and the thermometer in the nineties; more impossible yet to regale our visitors. And yet nothing is more possible or less expensive than to have the thing always at hand. 'In Paris, where siphons were first introduced, iced. "siphon water" was the thing, to have in the house. I often wonder that so little use is made of them in this soda water-loving country, except under a doctor's direction. Half, a dozen siphons of plain soda cost 90 cents; perhaps less in large cities, and if you are known to your druggist you will not be charged for the loan of the siphons. Keep them on ice and you have your soda water ready. Make and keep bottled a few simple syrups. Vanilla syrup, coffee syrup, ginger syrup—and, you can have EFFERVESCENT SODA-WATER AT HOME.

flavored sods at a moment's notice. In fruit season half fill the glass with fresh fruit syrup and sugar, fill up from the siphon, and you have a drink for the gods.

SODA MILK.

This is an excellent and nourishing drink in hot weather, and will remain on the most delicate stomach when anything but koumiss would be rejected, and is simply soda from the siphon and milk.

CLARET CUP WITH SODA.

This is excellently made from California wine. Pour a bottle of claret into a pitcher, add a sliced orange, leaving out the first and last slice, and a strip of cucumber peel as long as your finger; sweeten with syrup; add, if liked, s wines ass of Santa Cruze rum; set this in crused ice and just before drinking strain and and the contents of a siphon of soda water; stir and serve at once.

Of all cups except champagne perhaps cider is the best Pour a quart of cider into a pitcher, slice an orange into it or three slices of lemon; syrup or not according as the cider is sweet or sour, add a glass of sherry and one of brandy, with a pint of crushed strawberries, if in season, otherwise a cup of chopped pineapple and a few drops of almond flavoring. If champagne cider is used let it be iced before used. Let all stand till chillet. Then strain and add a siphon of soda. The soda water must always be used the last thing, and when there is time to make the "cup" cold enough without do not add ice to it, as if it stands it gets poor. Sweeten all cups with syrup made thus:—Pour boiling water, a pint on a pound of white sugar. When dislast thing, and when there is time to have the pint, on a pound of white sugar. When dis-solved bottle for use. The use of the syrup pre-vents the last of the cup being too sweet.— Philadelphia Press.

SUCCESSFUL MUSICAL COMPOSERS. THE EARNINGS OF SOME OF THE MOST POPULAR SONG WRITERS.

It is a we'l recognized fact in the "professions' that directly an author or a musician writes a successful rovel or a popular sone, thousands of men and women throughout the country try their hands at the different arts of literature and music, under the painful delusion that they are about to speedily make their for-tunes. At such a time the houses of the leading publishers are deluged with three volume novels and reams of music in manuscript. The odds are that the disgusted publisher gives orders to his clerks to return the stuff whole sale, with the polite but encouraging notifica-tion that "arrangements have been made for the season." We may well try and see, therefore, what the possibilities are of a young musician earning his livelihood in dilligently following up the art by which Amphion is said to have built the walls of Thebes, and which was the object of so much aversion on the part of Johnson, Peel and

M. Gounod, who obtained but a £100 for the E glish rights of "Faust," receives £80 or £100 for every song he writes, and is content to do without a royalty; but a majority of our more Gooseberry puddir g—Make a paste of flour and beef suet chopped fine, five well teat-n eggs, half a nutmeg grated, a little ginger or spice and some salt; roll out the paste, put it into a cloth, fill it with gooseberries and sugar and let it boil three hours. This is an English recipe.

Cream cake—Beat to a froth one cup of sugar and three eggs; on this pour one cup of sweet composers who form the sum total of the recognized genius of the country.

We are speaking here of the average songs of our succes-ful musicans. From time to time our succes-ful musicans. From time to time each and all of these will, to use an American phrase, "strike ile," that is, they will write a melody that will fairly take the town by storm. Such songs as "Punchinello" "For Ever and for Ever," "Some Day," "Nancy Lee," and "The Maid of the Mill" will run into one hundred thousand copies or more, and will bring £300 er £40 to their composers: but it must be remembered must that a man can hope, at the best, to secure but one such success during four or five years of hard work. As an instance, we can only p int to a couple of really successful songs during the past two years, and these from the p ns of Mr. Stephen Adams and Miss Hope Temple. The other writers are, so to speak, standing by. Their turn will come in a temperature of recognizing such an occasional sucyears, and, recognizing such an occasional suc-cess, they will look out for rainy seasons and be prepared for them.

To make a little more general estimate we should say that a musician of the foremost rank will not, apart from dramatic work, make more than £1,500 a year. The curious feature about such returns is that the larger amount of them will come from the composition of successful ballads. Strange as it may seem from an arballads. Strange as it may seem from an artistic point of view, it is exceedingly difficult for any musician to earn even a bare livelihood if he devotes himself to the production of oratorio or cantata work. True, a few orders are given every year for such works, and M. Gounod received £4,000 for "The Research of the first make an annual total of demption," but if we make an annual total of amounts brought in by kindred works they will amounts orought in by kindred works they will not average a pound a cantata. Naturally, therefore, the majority of musicians, while recognizing the beauty of art, fail to serve her until she shall appear to them with the golden staff.—London Exchange.

OUR WIVES. Ruskin, in speaking of the wife, says :- "A Ruskin, in speaking of the wife, says:—"A judicious wife is always nipping off from her husband's moral nature little twiss that are growing in the wrong direction. She keeps him in shape by pruning. If you say anything silly she will affectionately style you so. It you declare that you will do some absurd thing she will find some way of preventing you from doing it. And by far the chief part of all the common sense there is in the world belongs unquestionably to women. The wisest things which a man ably to women. The wisest things which a man commonly does are those which his wife counsels him to do. A wife is a grand wielder of the moral pruning knife. If Johnston's wife had lived there would have been no hoarding up of orange peel, no touching all the posts in walking along the street, no eating and drinking with disgust-ing velocity. If Oliver Goldanith had been married he never would have worn that memorable and ridiculous coat. Whenever you find a man whom you know little about, cddily dressed, talking absurdly or exhibiting eccen tricity of manner, you may be sure he is not a married man, for the corners are rounded off, the little shoots pared away, in married men. Wives have much more sense than their husbands. The wife's advice is like the ballast that keeps the ship steady."

Well, Esther had a cherful, sunny temper and a great deal of tact. Then she enjoyed perfect health and was always so sweet, neat and wholesome that Fred found his own home most pleasant, and his own wife more agreeable than any other being. As the year passed and he saw other women of Esther's age grow aick-ly, faded and querulous, he realized more and more that he had "a jewel of a wife." LIBERAL LORDS AND THE COERCION ACT.

The following protest against the Coercion Bill has been placed by 26 Liberal Peers upon the Journals of the House of Lords:

"1. Because exception of criminal legislation realization of invited and the ordinary administration of invited in the ordinary administration of invited invited in the ordinary administration of the ordinary administration ordinary administration ordinary administration ordinary administration ordinary weakens the ordinary administration of justice by inducing reliance on arbitrary methods, and is at the best only temporary in its effect, while it causes lasting irritation, and intense hatred and mistrust of law.

"2 Because while it is the fact that in some parts of Ire and the people do not support the administration of the law, we do not, after nearly two years free from exceptional legislation, see evidence of such an amount of crime and lawlessness at the present time as has been held to justify Parliament in enacting measures of special severity.

"3. Because the Bill gives the Irish Executive power, on its own responsibility, to deprive the whole or any part of the Irish people of those constitutional safeguards and individual rights, which are so justly prized in Great

"4. Because even if some change in the law of criminal procedure in Ireland be expedient, it is not to submit for judicial determination questions most difficult of solution, such as charges of conspiracy, to subordinate tribunals, dependent upon the will of the Executive.

5. Because this bill is not only directed against crime and outrage, but against associations leaving their spirals.

tions, lawful in their objects and methods, which are placed at the mercy of the Executive whenever such associations in the opinion of the Executive disturb the maintenance of law and order. 6. Because such legislation is likely to create and stimulate the action of secret societies which will be more dangerous than open asso ciations. 7. Because the experience of a long series of repressive acts conclusively show that exceptional legislation of this kind has failed to secure any permanent respect for law and order, while it tends to render the present system of Government in Ireland odious to the Irish people. 8. Because the only true remedy for the evil-which this bill is intended to meet is to be found in legislation which will bring the people of Ire-land into harmony and sympathy with the law and its administration.

HORRORS OF NIGHTMARE. CURIOUS ATTACK OF AN ENTIRE FRENCH REGI-

A French physician has recorded a very ex traordinary case in which the nightmare at tacked an entire regiment of soldiers. Dr.

Laurent, the physician in question, said he was surge n of the First battalion of the Latour d'Auvergne regiment, when it was garrisoned at Palmi, at Calabria. At midnight, in the month of June, the order to march with all possible speed to Tropea, forty miles away, was given. At seven o'clock on the following evening Tropes was reached, scarcely a single halt have ing been made by the way.

The men arrived in a pitiful state of axbans

tion and fatigue, in consequence mainly of the intense heat, found their rations cooked, their quarters prepared, and, after a hearty mea!, retired for the night in an abandoned monastery a building much too sma'l for their number sleeping upon heaps of straw, some in one room, some in others. Just before occupying their unwholesome quarters some of the soldiers heard that the monastery was haunted by a demon dog, and spread the story from one to another, some uncomfortably, most of them merrily. There seemed little fear of their sleep being disturbed after such a day's work as they had

But at midnight the deep silence was suddenly broken by loud, wild cries of terror. The white faced soldiers rushed tumultuously from their chambers in every direction, and one and all at once told the same tale of superstitious terror One and all had been visited by the phantom dog! The monastery was abandoned, and the weary soldiers, veterans in war and famous for their bravery, wandered about the town or slept in sheds and outhouses rather than again face the terrors of what was undoubtedly a bad attack of nightmare, consequent upon following an undigested meal taken while in a condition of great fatigue. Some idea of the awful state of terror into which the distorted images of the fancy or memory have thrown people may be gleaned from the fact that medi cal men have recorded many cases in which they have resulted in death.

An artist of eminence, whose engraved pic tures are now to be seen in every print shop window—one of the writer's best friends—has the nightmare occasionally, but with him it invariably takes one form. He seems to be awakened by a sensation of coldness, such as might be caused by the sudden admission of outdoor air, and at the same time sees a man's hand busy with the window fastening. He slips quietly from his bed, takes up the roker, con-ceals himself behind the window curtain, hears the fastening of the window thrust back, and with a sensation of spiteful glee raises his weapon to bring it down with all his force upon the head which he knows will in a minute or two be thrust into his room. The window is softly and slowly raised, and he is in a quiver or the comments of the sense of eagerness to deal the vengeful blow, a grim smile on his face, a fierce flash in his eye, when o! the head appears.

But horror of horrors! The artist's upraised arm is still rigid; he cannot strike the blow. And the face then turned toward him is one of And the face then turned toward him is one of hideous mockery and scorn, with a protruding tongue, the faugs of a wild beast and the expression of a fiend. And so he remains face to face with his frightful enemy, utterly helpless and in a state of indescribable torture. The effect of nightmare in this form is, he tells me, an almost maddening one, and he can only account for its frequent receiving as resulting. count for its frequent repetition as resulting from an unusually powerful impression made upon his memory in conjunction with its curious ally, the imagination, which is, in his case, one of more than usual power.—London Exchange

The proudest triumph in a man's life is when he makes a friend of a former enemy. The joy is then akin to that which angels feel as they rejoice over the sinner that repenteth.

LIVING ONE THOUSAND YEARS. The Lotus, one of the organs of the Theosophists, has been oblining enough to take all the orld into the secret of the clixir of life. This form of the philosopher's stone is, it seems, neither a drug nor potion, but a series of maxims, the due observance of which will ensure you one thousand years of life. According to the inspired writer in the Lotus, a human being dies only when his will ceases to be strong enough to keep him alive. Therefore the first essential to long life is a strong will and a determination not to die, whatever happens. A mere passing effect of the will is obviously not enough to produce such a stupendous result. There mut be a "permanent and unrelaxing concentration." But beyond that much more is necestration. sary. Every animal desire—even the incluna-tion to eat and drink—must be a radually masthered until at length the living man becomes othercalized. Ambition, affection, anger—indeed, every inclination which is not purely spiritual and contemplative—must be got rid of The critical moment in the existence of a person who seeks to live for several centuries is the period when in the ordinary course of nature other men die, since "every man has an inevitother men die, since "every man has an inevitable tendency to repeat the actions of his ancestors." The fewer the "gross and fleshly molecules" in the man's being the better his chance of turning the awkward corner. That once achieved, he is safe.
