

CHAPTER X.

TO LEXINGTON AND CONCORD, AND BACK TO BOSTON.

April 19, 1775.

Gage sends an expedition to Concord	PAGE
Revere's ride. The news reaches Concord and Acton	152
The militia and alarm-men of Lexington turn out	153
The conflict at Lexington	154
The village martyrs	155
Prophecy of Samuel Adams. The people of Concord rally	156
The British enter Concord. Isaac Davis and the men of Acton	157
The British begin the destruction of stores	158
The beginning of the revolution	159
The first martyrs at Concord. The British retreat	160
The Americans give them chase through Lincoln	161
The British are re-enforced at Lexington	162
Their further retreat and pursuit through Cambridge	163
The British reach Charlestown	164
The siege of Boston. Import of the nineteenth of April 1775	165
	166

CHAPTER XI.

EFFECTS OF THE DAY OF LEXINGTON AND CONCORD. THE GENERAL RISING.

April-June 1775.

The alarm spreads over the continent	167
The people of Massachusetts rush to the camp	168
Men of New Hampshire. John Stark	169
The men of Connecticut. Israel Putnam	170
Movements in Rhode Island. Character of the army	171
The British officers put to shame. How Percy forgot himself	172
Wrongs of the people of Boston	172
The voice of Connecticut	172
Want of military stores. Proposed expedition against Quebec	173
Want of money. Massachusetts needs a government of its own	174
Formation of an American army	174
Character of Greene of Rhode Island	175
A new committee in New York. An association	176
Address from New York to London	177
Journey of the delegates from Massachusetts and Connecticut	177
Spirit of New Jersey. Of Pennsylvania	178
Of Maryland. The rising in Virginia	179
Triumph of Henry. Proceedings in South Carolina	180
In Georgia	181
The men of Vermont cross Lake Champlain	182
Ticonderoga taken by surprise	183
The British flag is struck to mariners of Maine	184