A Definite Policy If City is To Grow

Too Sordid Objects.

This leads us to the proposition late-statement. The sulphurous and ar-semical gases destroy all vegetation and other forms of life within a dis-tance of five or six miles from the smelter. Special fans and other contrivances have to be employed to carry the foul vapors away from the immediate neighborhood of the workmen at the smeltine works, and even with every precaution their health becomes a place of residence so long as such things as these are tolerated within the city. The true solution of several guestions here is in the education of the people of influence in what constitutes a healthy and proper public spirit. Henry Montgomery.
