LUMBER STILL BURNING

The fire, which devastated Stetson, Cutler & Company's mill at Pleasant Point Wednesday, was still burning in some of the lumber piles early this morning. It broke out afresh last night after the water supply from the pond nearby was exhausted. A call was sent for the Neptune and as soon as the tug could get through the falls she pumped two streams into the flames thus averting for the time being danger which threatened other lumber piles and property nearby. It is estimated that over $60,000 worth of lumber was destroyed, including one pile of eight inch stock containing 800,000 feet. Most of the insurance was placed by Boston agencies a comparatively small amount being carried by local firms.
