Owen Sound Veteran Dies of Carbolic Poisoning.

Poisoning.

Owen Sound, May 5—A fatal mistake was made by Robert Ward, who died from the effects of carbolic acid poisoning. He and his wife had been at a dance, returning home about 3 a. m. Mrs. Ward went at once to her room, but hearing her husband groan a few minutes afterward, returned to the room where she had left him, to find him writhing in agony and almost unconscious. Though all possible haste was made to call a doctor, Mr. Ward was dead before anything could be done. The surmise is that he had intended to take some medicine and got hold of the wrong bottle. Mr. Ward, who was a war veteran of the Great War, is survived by his widow, two children, his parents, two brothers and five sisters.

VALUABLES SEIZED. German Customs Authorities Busy at Dutch Frontier.

The Hague, May 5—During the last two weeks the German customs authorities at Oldenzaal, on the Dutch frontier, have seized precious stones to the value of seven million marks, bank notes valued at 600,000 marks and £400 which passengers endeavored to smuggle out. Detectives resort to all sorts of schemes, mingling and talking with passengers on trains in order to seize the valuables at the frontier. Control measures are becoming increasingly strict.

Advertise G. W.'s Church.

Washington, May 5—Old Pohick church, in Mount Vernon, Va., where George Washington worshipped, built in 1773, has succumbed to present day methods and is advertising in the newspapers. The historic incidents are pointed out in the advertisements.
