SUCCESSFUL ACTRESS.

The dramatic critic of the Montreal Herald on Saturday had this to say concerning the work of Miss Dihel K. Mollison:

Miss Mollison during the past week has been a revelation to the dilettantiand a delight to the discerning. One should not be too enthusiastic on the strength of two plays ("Captain Swift" need not count), but in truth her parts in these two have been so diverse, and she has been so thoroughly and intelligently at home in each of them, as Mrs. Dage the frightened find as Mrs. Bulmer the unfrightened that as Mrs. Bulmer the unfrightened that as Mrs. Bulmer the unfrightened that one is forced to something more than passive interest in what she is going to do hereafter. Miss Mollison is not by nature a type, vocally and otherwise, of the English society woman, but she has evidently studied very good models with very great care. As a society woman, if we substract the essentially English element, she is as perfect a representative as any woman on the stage this side of the Atlantic today. Her playing in "Wheels Within Wheels," however, was as much ahead of her Mrs. Dane as the latter performance was ahead of anything in that line that had been seen at Proctor's. The break-down scene of "Mrs. Dane's Defence" was the weakest point of the personation, in proportion as it was the point where a great tragedienme would have been most convincing. In the Carton play this week there were no weak spots in Miss Mollison's assumption. If there was one place less interesting than the rest, it was the one moment when she was alone on the stage, reading her sister-in-law's letter. Here the situation called for absolute naturalism and abandonment of society finesse. And this we did not get.

MOORISH SLAVERY.

It would do those good who write passionate articles on Moorish slavery to see the well fed, lazy slave of Wazar Bounging in the sun, kiff pipe in mouth and scarcely doing a stroke of work from week's end to week's end. The most ordinary English kitchenmaid would accomplish in a couple of hours what a Wazan slave does in a week. All are free to come and go as they please, but none avails himself of this freedom. The reason is not far to seek. In Wazan they are fed and clothed by the shereefs and on holidays and feast days receive presents of money.

Thus all the necessities of life are found them without their having to work for them, which otherwise they would be obliged to do. Nor is it only the necessifies of life that are thus supplied to them free, but they are given each his room to live in and married at the expense of the shereefs to slave women. Their children, by law slaves, are not necessarily so and are often apprenticed to workmen to learn some trade or if they wish are free to seek their fortune in other lands.—Blackwood's Magazine.

GEESE THAT LAY GOLDEN EGGS.

Once upon a time there was a promoter who owned a common, everyday goose who laid the usual, ordinary goose eggs. He conceived the scheme of syndicating the goose on a gold egg basis and proceeded to do so.

He informed the trusting public that soon his goose would lay an egg of gold each day and offered for sale stock in the Golden Goose Egg company, limited, at bedrock prices. There was a wild rush for the stock, and the promoter suddenly found himself wealthy. He continued to sell the stock as long as there were buyers, for he did not want to kill the goose that laid the egg. His goose continued the same ordinary fowl as before.

A UNIQUE HOME.

In Sweden and Norway there are several homes for spinsters. One of the seat least is as attractive as it is unique. It is a monument to the memor of an exceedingly wealthy old man, who, dying more than 200 years ago, let the major part of his fortune to the old maids among his descendants. A superb home was built, furnished and managed my salaried trustees. It flourished and has continued. Any unmarked woman who can prove blood relationship to the founder of the institution is entitled to admission to the home. She is given a suit of rooms, a servant, private meals ad is subject to no rules save such as ordinary good behavior demands.

MINISTERS' MAIDS.

"Are you a minister's wife " was a query encountered so frequently by a young matron in search of a maid that she scented a story.

"Why this mania to live under the droppings of the sanctuary?" inquired the matron or words to that effect. Then it appeared that the minister's family is considered a most desirable place because of the opportunities for witness fees in wedding cases. There are few bridegrooms who come without a witness to be married who will not bestow a generous tip upon the girl who furnishes this small but necessary feature of the ceremony.—New York Tribune.

VOLCANOES.

Bons ago the earth on which we live was a huge mass of "fire mist," Astronomers tell us that today in the heavens we can see vast nebulæ, suggesting what the earth was once. Gradually the surface of the "fire mist" cooled and hardened, but the interior is still intensely hot. Whether it is solid, liquid or viscous we do not know. This heat, raging miles below the surface, at times escapes through the hard crust by vents or volcances. There are from 300 to 350 volcances on the globe. This estimate includes merely live volcances which within recent times have been in action. If we should count the many mountains scattered over the earth which show today signs of volcance awould have to be increased by many hundreds. Volcances would seem to be arranged with more or less symmetry in belts circling the great oceans. A ring of fire surrounds the Pacific. Starting at the South Shetland islands, several hundred miles south of Cape Horn, a helt of volcances extends up the wast coast of South America, Central America and North America; from Alaska it crosses the Pacific along the Aleutian Islands to Kamchatka; thence it follows the east edge of the Pacific through the Kurile islands, Japan, Formosa, the Philippines, the Moluccas, the Solomon islands, the North Hebrides, New Zealand and finally ends in Mounts Terror and Erebus, on the Antarctic continent, — Geographic Magazine.

Mario's foible was smoking. As smoking was forbidden at the theatre, he would never sign a contract until the clause which made him an exception to the rule was inserted. He would have his valet waiting in the wings with a match and a cigar and would rush off the stage, take a few whiffs and then returns to a tender love scene. The cigars that he smoked cost him half a crown, and he never more than partially finished one. Even the street boys in London knew him, and when they followed his carriage, cheering, he would have a handful of coins ready to toss to them.

A Coroner's Fees Aided in Securing Passage to Civilization.

"Twenty years ago a comedy trio left Denver which had some rather unusual experiences, says the St. Louis Republic. Eugene Field, Otto Rothaker, and myself were the three performers," said Howard Saxby of Cincinnati in a recent interview. "We decided that there was money in the show business and started out to demonstrate to the world our great ability as entertainers. We were all three employed on the Denver Republican, but we decided that newspaper life was too monotonous, interested a partner who sold a horse to get money enough to but up on the road, and started for Colorado Springs, where we were to play our first engagement.

"Field and I were to read humorous selections of our own compositions and Rothaker was to give some of Tennyson's poems that there might be variety in the entertainment. Our success in Colorado Springs was remarkable. We had 427 people in the audience, and everything went off smoothly. All of our stunts were very polite, and it was necessary for each of us to wear a dress coat. We had only one dress coat, and consequently it was impossible for us to do any reading in concert. As soon as a performer dashed off the stage he skinned off that stock coat and the man who was to do the next number slipped into it. Unfortunately, all of us were not the same size. Field and I were larger than Rothaker and the coat was as much too small for us as it was too large for Rothaker.

"We liked Colorado Springs so well that we came pretty near not getting to Pueblo, our next stop. Our first success wasn't repeated in Pluebo. Seventeen people came out to hear us, and that was the most exacting audience I ever saw. It was painfully candid and had no hesitation about expressing its opinion in plain Colorado English.

"Fleld had just begun his Primer at that time. When nothing but jeers greeted our other members. Field decided that he would try some of the Primer on the audience. He stepped on the stage with great assurance at the conclusion of of the distance. Another Pueblo reception greeted us, and we found ourselves stranded. We had nothing to pawn but the dress coat, and there wasn't much demand for full evening clothes in New Mexico at that time. An old man who had a room at the hotel adjoining mine committed suicide during the night. When the coroner came to hold an inquest we three were the first applicants for places on the jury, and the fee we received enabled us to get back to Colorado."

WHEN MOORE SANG.

In singing his own songs Moore altered the arrangement of the airs and sang the first part of each verse twice over at the beginning instead of as a refrain at the end. In that gloricus song of his, "Oh, the Light Entrancing!" Moore's own singing of it was a matchless treat. With head upraised, he seemed almost to revel in the fresh morning light as he gazed on the "sight entrancing," and his eye sparkled as "files arrayed with helm and biade" seemed to pass' before him, while a deeper feeling awoke as the passion of the song came upon him.

His voice, one of infinite modulation, but of small compass, rose clear and thrilling to its highest pitch as he sang:

Go ask yon desput whether

Go ask yon despot whether His armed bands could bring such hands And hearts as ours together.

His song was an inspired recitative, and he seemed to improvise as he ran is fingers over the notes, and as the time of the order, Field began to read from the Primer. It wasn't a Field crowd, and the Primer failed to entertain.

The patience of fishermen who really love the sport is the theme of many stories. One is told by a man who, travelling on foot through part of England, came upon a solitary fisherman who looked us if time and the world might pass away without disturbing his content.

"Have you fished long in this stream?" asked the traveller.

"Eighteen year," was the calm response.
