John B. Jones, liquor license inspector, remarked this morning that he is frequently annoyed by receiving anonymous letters saying that the laws are being infringed but giving him no particulars or no chance to obtain any. All he can do in such cases is to disregard the communication. Only this morning, said Mr. Jones, he received a post card while he was en route in the North End calling his attention to the fact that some North End saloon has been keeping open after the regulation time, but no names are mentioned.

JOHN COLLINS—ANGEL.

Settled a Harrowing Family Squabble Last Evening.

A child crying, "Don't, papa, don't," attracted a motley crowd towards the entrance of the I. C. R. depot about nine o'clock last evening. The little fellow was with his father, mother and three little sisters. It was evident that a family squabble had taken place, and something was said to prompt the child to plead as he did. Officer John Collins towered over the forlorn-looking group, and the mother, who carried a babe in her arms, told a pitiful tale of domestic infelicity how her husband was ugly, how he cared little for the welfare of the home, and so on—a harrowing recital. The children gazed intently on the big policeman, as if pleading his intercession, while the man gave his side of the story. He said he was a blacksmith and earned $8.00 per week, but it was not enough. Then he conjured up a defence.

Officer Collins listened to the unpleasant reports, and sipping up the situation offered the strongly wholesome advice to the man, and did not forget to sprinkle a few wise hints into the mother's mind. He shamed them for their unreasonableness on a public street, and reminded them of their little ones.

When the family party left it seemed as if the policeman had been an angel in disguise, for both parents were ready to negotiate peace terms.

A KNIGHT'S RESTLESS NIGHT

A Visiting Pythian Preferred His Longed For Bed to River Excursion.

"I would dearly love to take in that excursion this afternoon, but (yawn) I'm too confounded sleepy!" It was a visiting Pythian who spoke, just about as the steamer May Queen was swinging from her dock with the Knights from afar and at home aboard, yesterday.

"Talk about entertainment," he exclaimed, "why at St. Stephen and Calais we were feted to the very eyes, and now the programme is being repeated. Actually, I don't think one-fifth of our party has slept a whole night through since we left home. We're about dead."

"I was sure I wouldn't get a few quiet winter at the hotel last night, it was so lovely and cool, but a lot of those harum-scarum Knights went the rounds of the house and systematically prevented all of our party from sleeping! We had to dress and join the procession. At 5 o'clock this morning they were playing and singing 'In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree' in the parlour.

"So I'm now going back to the hotel, and while those practical joke artists are enjoying the river I'll have a long-longed-for nap. Good day."

CAPT. PITT PESSIMISTIC.

Says Scow Ferry Business Is Now All Cut Up—The Subsidy.

Captain Pitt, the veteran ferryman at Gondola Point, was in town day before yesterday. He reports traffic across the Kennebec, via the primitive transportation lines, not by any means brisk.

"The business is all cut up," he says, "since the opposition parties have put on their sailing scow there hasn't been enough to make it pay as it would if only one scow was on." Captain Pitt agrees that the opposition line gets about one-third the traffic; "but they also get the subsidy," he archly adds. The government trans-Kennebec navigation is the "government" line. Still it is a great deal to know that he is getting the majority of the travelling people, which denotes no decline in good will towards him.

DOOLEY INQUEST.

The adjourned inquest into the death of Richard Dooley, who was killed in Carleton by the caving in of a trench in which he was working, was continued last evening in the City Hall, Carleton, before Coroner Kenner. Frederick Ring and Supt. Murdoch were put on the stand and examined. A somewhat lengthy discussion took place between the coroner and the lawyers as to the propriety of giving the title of foreman to J. Alfred Ring. The inquest will be continued at 7:30 Monday evening. Four or five more witnesses will be examined.
