A pretty wedding was solemnized at the residence of J. C. Simmons', when his eldest daughter, Stella Maud, was united in marriage to Taymas Fulton of Little River, son of the well known umberman of that place. The ceremony, which was a very quiet one, was only witnessed by the immediate rela-tives and friends of the contracting parties. The Rev. H. E. Harrison was the officiating clergyman. The bride, who was charmingly attired in a suit of blue cloth, with white silk trimming and hat to match, carried a shower bouquet of roses and carnations. She was attended by Miss Mabel Brown of Maugerville, who wore pale blue with silk trimmings and carried a bouquet of red roses. The groom was support ed by his cousin, T. J. Fulton. At the conclusion of the ceremony luncheon was served and the happy couple left on the steamer David Weston for a honeymoon trip to Boston and New York. The presents were many and beautiful. The groom's present to the bride was an opal brooch, and to the bridesmaid an amethyst ring. The orthograp may puzzle for a moment, but spell was not the strongest point of the valier party, and on investigation person here styled "Richard Pendr turns out to be none other than "I est Dick Penderel," the stoutest a most capable of the five Pende brothers who saved King Charles' erty, and not improbably his life, af

When honest Dick gave the Prince "leg-up" into the oak tree near brother's house, or later, when he ceived from the restored monarch pension of £100 a year and the right wear coat armor, he little thought to on Oak-Apple Day, over two centur later, one of his two sole remain heirs would be advertised for by court of chancery, and that throu his (the descendant's) non-appearant part of the well-won pension wo seem in danger of lapsing altogether

THE KING REMEMBERED. At the restoration the Penderels ca up to London with the rest of the loy: lsts; but, unlike most of these, th did not push forward their claims Charles' gratitude too eagerly. haps this was the best possible pol at all events, the new King rememb ed these humble friends, while he got many more prominent. To each the five brothers a pension of £100 p annum was granted, and these pe sions were subsequently confirmed "writ of Privy Seal, dated July 24, 167 as duly set forth n tihe advertis

The pensions were conferred up the Penderels and the heirs of the bodies in tail male forever, but, shou the male line of any one of the bro ers become extinct, provision was ma for the inheritance through femal much as in the case of peerages writ. The pensions were secured various crown rents, etc., in the tricts around Tong and Wolverhar ton, and that fervent loyalist, Pet Giffard of Chillington, and his he male were made trustees of the esta and the pensions.

Thus the Giffards were to be responsible for the welfare of their kinsfo and tenants, and the facts revealed Messrs. Francis and Johnson sho that the old hereditary feeling st survives, for it is the action of the present trustee, Mr. Gifford of Cillington which has brought this matter before Charles II. also granted to the Pe
