Under-Currents

By The Duchess

or another; or even if we stay why there is no power on earth that can compel anyone to say Yes at the altar, so long as they have breath left them to shout a good sensible No. So you can keep up heart, and remember I'm here.

"That's right. That will make you feel better. What an old wretch he is. There now, darling, poor darling. There now there."

It is plainly a part of Griselda's faith that soft rubbings and tender pattings of the back, mingled with kisses are full of healing power. Because she administers all these with a liberal mind. By degrees and through many sobs Vera—helped out no doubt, by Griselda's medicinal course—reveals to her that all had taken place in the afternoon.

An amused and surprised about Sexton says Griselda presently. "But are you sure you are not mistaken? He may have been led into it by that wily old father of his. I would not condemn him altogether, if I were you, until I had heard something more of it."

"I went of heart nothing more; I know that I don't always tell you the truth, but for my strange dislike to him? Whenever I saw him I felt as if I were shrinking into myself. I felt too you see, that I should suffer indignity at his hands. I was right; such strong presentations must bear fruit—did you not say this instance?"

"Still Sexton—if it had been my own else," says Griselda, in a puzzled tone. "He seems to me that sort of thing."

At this Vera rises patting her. "If you are going to defend him," she says with a touch of asperity, "I had far rather you went away and left me to myself."

"What will be the end of it?" asks Griselda. "Murder? Suicide? Will he kill me, or shall I kill him, or shall I make away with myself. I feel that would be the most considerate thing. Oh, when I think of Uncle Gregory's face, I feel as if I should like to shove a leaden bullet through his brain for my room for six weeks. He is so cold that I'm sure he's afraid of infection."

"He must have gone out driving shortly after I left him. After all, Griselda he is so taken with this precious scheme of his that perhaps he will forget about you?"

"Does he ever forget? Don't try to delude yourself or me either, my good child. I shall fortify myself with a capital dinner thanks to Sexton—that abundance."

CHAPTER XX.

O earth so full of dreary noises O men with wailing in your voices O delyed gold, the wailer's heep O strife. O curse that's not to fall. God strikes a silence through you all.

Long since the moon has mounted the heavens; now it is at its full. At its starry state keep company with it, the hush of sleeping Nature pays homage to it. Solemnly slowly from the old belfry tower the twelve strikes of midnight have sounded on the air.

Vera rising cautiously from beside Griselda who is at its hair fast, is startled by thoughts of what to-morrow may bring her girls gently on to the bare white boards across which the moonbeams are travelling delicately.

Sleep has deserted her. Wood him as she may, the treacherous little girl refuses to come to her with sweet slumber. She drops her head on her hand, where to hush the saddened brain to slumber. Wary at last of her efforts to lose herself and her hateful thoughts in unconsciousness, she determines to rise, and try what study may do for her.

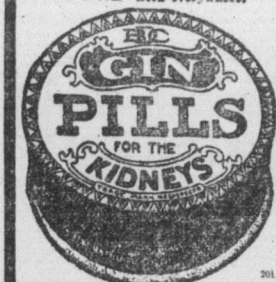

To push away from her mind the thought of the little creature on the top of her head, is the work of a moment. No candle is needed for such work as that, and a lighter candle might disturb Griselda—poor Griselda, who has worries of her own. Feeling cautiously amongst the intricacies of the crazy old wardrobe, that every moment threatens to come to pieces and bury her beneath its ruins she draws out at last a dainty loosely-made gown of white cambric, covered with lace, an old friend of hers and forgetting herself into it listens it threatening her naked feet into a pair of bronze slippers that match admirably with her sun-smiten hair, and arming herself with matches, she steps lightly across the room opens the door and speeds with all haste over the corridor gaunt and ghastly in the dim light, down the grand old staircase and enters a room on the left of the library, where one day she made the discovery that comfort was to be found.

Striking a match she lights a lamp upon a side table and proceeds to examine the bookshelves. Heavy, rather austere volumes, for the most part law books and such like adorn them, but with here and there amongst them a forgotten gem.

Taking down one that she thinks will please her, Vera turns to find a comfortable lounge of some sort, a difficult matter at a Grey Court as a rule—but not here. The original row

LEMONS BRING OUT THE HIDDEN BEAUTY

Make this lotion for very little cost and get 50c for yourself.

An attractive skin wins admiration. In social life and in business the girl or woman whose face and hands show evidence of constant care enjoys a tremendous advantage over those who do not realize the value of a healthy skin and a spotless complexion.

At the cost of a small jar of ordinary cold cream one can prepare a full quart of the most wonderful lemon skin softener and complexion beautifier, by squeezing the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white. Care should be taken to strain the juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan, and is the skin softener, smoother and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any pharmacy and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quart of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it into the face, neck, arms and hands. It naturally should help to soften freckles, bleach and bring out the roses and beauty of any skin.

Uric Acid in Meat Brings Rheumatism

Says a Little Salt in Water May Save You From Dread Attack.

Rheumatism is easier to avoid than to cure, states a well-known authority. We are advised to dress warmly; keep the feet dry; avoid exposure; eat less meat, but drink plenty of good water.

Rheumatism is a direct result of eating too much meat and other rich foods that produce uric acid which is absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine, and the pores of the skin are also means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate the uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Epsom salt; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Just salt is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of lemons and lemon juice, combined with lilia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism.

Girls! Girls! Try It! Stop Dandruff And Beautify Your Hair

Hair stops falling out and gets thick, wavy, strong and beautiful.

Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's. Just try "Danderrine hair cleanser." Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderrine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt and excessive oil and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair.

Besides beautifying the hair at once, Danderrine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair.

But what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use when you will be able to see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty soft hair and lots of it, surely get a small bottle of Knowledge. Danderrine from any druggist or toilet counter for a few cents.

of chairs look one as uncompromising as another and are all drawn stiffly back against the walls, such portions of wall, at least, as the bookcases leave bare—bookcases without any unfriendly glass to hide their treasures and that reach up to the ceiling which is vaulted. But scattered broadcast through the room are innumerable easy chairs of modern construction that harmonize with the quaint old room and yet seem hardly part of it.
