ARTS

Look people at warp drive

BY ROLAND STONE

THIS BAND HAS two things going for it that many bands today lack: humour and a great amount of musical ability. This combination is the Look People's forte and is the backbone of their latest release, "Boogazm."

Musically, the band cannot be faulted as all members are extremely talented. Their sound comes across as an amalgamation of the Red Hot Chili Peppers at their happiest, and Frank Zappa at his jazziest. For the most part this works, yet there are a few moments on the album when something seems to be missing.

Prime examples of this are found in the songs "The Environment is Everywhere," which has a chorus that literally ruins the song, and "Mr. Big Ferraro," which is just plain irritating from beginning to end.

Whereas the Red Hot Chili Peppers, who play music of a similar vein, seem to be taking themselves too seriously these days, the Look People set the controls on warp drive into the galaxy of silliness and never look back. Songs such as "Bozo the Killer," "Lousy Lover," "Faithlift" and "Five" are all funky, danceable songs with lyrics that will have the listener rolling with laughter, while "In Saunders Fields" and "The Environment is Everywhere" provide tongue-in-cheek looks at serious topics. In a world where most bands are striving for heaviness, artsiness, or cash, it's refreshing to come across a band that thrives only on having fun.

To sum it up, if you're into up-tempo, funky, funny tunes and don't mind two or three really lame moments over the course of an album, then this band is for you. Listen and laugh as the Look People provide you with a uniquely warped world-view. You won't be disappointed.
