QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Miscellaneous.

RIGHT TO LUMBER.

A forces drain which runs down road-side into B, then into C. B had to put 12-inch tile in C; A had to put 10-inch tile in B, which was an old box. Whose property was the old lumber?

SUBSCRIBER.

Ans.—So far as we can judge from the foregoing statement of facts, the lumber in question belongs to the owner of the land whereon it lies.

THRESHER FOR CLOVER.

1. Is there any attachment which could be put on an ordinary grain separator so that it would thresh clover seed, or could clover be threshed by an ordinary separator so that one could get some threshed for seed, even if it was not done very well?

2. Is there any small machine for threshing clover that could be operated by a two-horse or three-horse gasoline engine?

G. G.

Ans.—1. Some manufacturers of threshing machinery make an attachment for their grain separators with which it is possible to thresh clover. They do not do as good work as the clover huller, but they will get most of the seed by running it through twice. This could be used where a little clover is grown for seed, but where clover is grown in any quantity, a special clover huller could be used to better advantage.

2. We know of no clover threshing machine which could be operated satisfactorily with so little power.

CONTAGIOUS ABORTION.

Could you kindly give me some information regarding cows. I have so much trouble with abortion. Some of the cows carry the fetus four months, some nearly nine months, and others do not get in calf. They come in heat every three weeks. Is there any cure?

FARMER.

Ans.—From the description given, the cows are evidently troubled with contagious abortion. This is one of the worst maladies of cows, and one which, if well established, is difficult to treat. There is much difference of opinion as to treatment, both preventive and curative. Some claim that carbolic acid administered by the month has proved of value in combating the disease, but a committee of seven prominent men, including four eminent veterinarians, appointed by the President of the Board of Agriculture of Great Britain to inquire, by means of experimental investigation, into the pathology and etiology of the disease, found this treatment useless. The committee reported as follows with regard to prevention and eradication:

1. Spraying the external genital organs.—We think that this method is useless so long as the animals remain in an infested byre, and that it may be discarded. Immediately before removing an animal from infested to clean premises, however, we think it would be advisable to thoroughly wash the posterior portions of its body with a disinfectant solution such as corrosive sublimate 1 in 2,000, or carbolic acid in 3-per-cent. solution.

2. Isolation of animals as soon as they show signs of abortion.—Isolation of the infected animals must be complete before and after the act to be of any real value.

3. Internal administration of carbolic acid. As a preventive agent, by internal administration, we believe carbolic acid to be useless.

4. Irrigation of the genital passages after abortion.—Almost immediately after abortion and expulsion of the membranes, the uterus contracts, and its internal surfaces come into apposition. Its condition is such that it would not be possible to force fluid into it with a pump from the vagina.

5. The keeping of a special bull for cows which have aborted.—We think there is something to be said in favor of this, and when this is not possible, of disinfecting the external genital organ of the bull after he has served such cows.

Infection may take place by the vagina or by ingestion through the mouth. Cows become immune, as a rule, after two, or at most, three abortions.

GEORGE WATSON, Lowfield House, Wigton, Cumberland, England.

A coal miner in Southern Ohio, who couldn't read nor write, recently received his pay envelope at the new mine. All that was written upon it was "No. 16." The miner looked at the writing for a long time, then exclaimed, "That's a new way to spell George Primrose, I reckon!"
