

Poetry.
THE STARS.

Look through the open window!
The day is scarcely done,
Yet the silver stars are peering
From the blue sky one by one,
Stealing gradually towards us,
With their still and pleasant light,
Like ships that from the ocean
Slowly lift their sails of white.

Or they come to us like strangers
From a far-off land unknown,
From beyond a mighty desert
Which untraveller is and lone,
Come, like modest stranger maidens,
Trembling with secret fear,
Lest some evil thing await them
In the new land which they near.

Fairy stars! forever lovely,
Ever welcome to our sight,
Be it on a summer evening
Or a chill October night,
O! we hail with joy your advent,
And your presence sweet we love,
For ye lift our passive spirits
To the dreamy world above.

And ye seem placed there to cheer us,
As below we toil and weep,
Like the steadfast lights that glimmer
For the seaman o'er the deep.

Our love for things around us
May change with every hour,
May perish with the objects,
May wither like the flower.
But we look for you forever,
With the same unchanged desires,
With the earnest, quiet longing,
With the love that ne'er expires.

Miscellaneous.
THE SAILOR AGRICULTURIST.

A sailor, who had become disgusted with his profession, took French leave at New Orleans, and started to walk across the country to New York. He spent his last shilling on the road, and somewhere in Ohio hired himself to a farmer, who sent him out on the following morning to plough a piece of ground. In the course of an hour Jack made his appearance at the house, very much flushed in the face, as if ploughing the earth was a rather more tedious business than ploughing the domain of Father Neptune.

"Well, Jack," inquired the old squire, "what's the matter? How did you get along?"

"She's wrecked, sir," was the reply.

"Wrecked!" echoed his employer; "why, Jack, what do you mean?"

"Why, sir," said Jack, bringing his hand to his forehead, "the craft wasn't well ballasted, sir, and wouldn't it be the tiller; and though I held her hard a-port, she lurched off a-lee, and run on the breakers. You'll find her out yonder, sir, due nor-east, on her beam-ends, with her cut-water hard in a stump, the larboard on the larboard side, and the old mare of the rigging."

He was discharged forthwith.

Rather Frightful.—Some time ago, a hearse was travelling to Southport, and the driver being rather thirsty, called at Robert Halsall's, the Morris-dancers, to get a glass of good ale. He dismounted, and went into the house. In the meantime, some countrymen said to a man in liquor, "Jem, if th'at'll get inside here, that can ride to th' port for nought." James accordingly got inside unknown to the driver. When they came to a place about a mile from Southport, the driver stopped the hearse. He had no sooner dismounted than a low sepulchral voice said, "Are we at th' fur end?" The driver was electrified and horror-stricken, and ran off with great speed. However, when it came to be understood how the frightful noise originated, the people were much diverted.—Preston Chronicle.

Curious Charge of a Judge.—An article in Blackwoods Magazine, on Modern State Trials, contains the following anecdote: Mr. Fletcher, a Judge in Ireland, in the year 1812, thus addressed an Irish jury in a trial for murder, occasioned in a duel!—"GENTLEMEN, it is my business to lay down the law to you and I shall do so. Where two people go out to fight a duel, and one of them falls, the law says it is murder. And I tell you by law it is murder; but at the same time, a fairer duel I never heard of in the whole course of my life!"—The prisoners were, of course, immediately acquitted.

Lately, a young and beautiful damsel, near Frankfort, Kentucky, having two lovers, and not knowing which to prefer, settled the matter by marrying one and eloping with the other.

An American paper, the Germantown (Pa.) Telegraph, has the following:—"There has just been brought to light the application of a power which is to supersede entirely the present steam power of the world! This announcement may stagger some, but the discovery, when it shall be divulged, will stagger them a thousand times more. It has been made by an Eastern man, who has completed his models—one of which will be deposited at Washington as soon as patent rights shall be secured in the different European countries. The machinery is entirely perfected—the power is a motive one, and steam has no part in creating it. So simple and economical are the principle and application, that two tons of coal will be sufficient to drive the largest ship of the line around the world. We are not at liberty now to divulge more of this wonderful discovery, but we predict with the greatest confidence, that a short time only will elapse before a total revolution will take place throughout the world in our motive power system. Indeed, we assert, with the same confidence, that the year 1850 terminated the sovereignty of steam. This is no chimera. We mean what we say, and time, brief in point of duration, will evolve this wonder, at present hid as with a gauze only, from the public eye, to the astonishment of Christendom—an astonishment far greater than that produced by the discovery of steam or the magnetic telegraph.

The Albany Knickerbocker cannot see what Philadelphia wants with a School of Design for women, when they are designing enough already.
