HAYDN'S UNHAPPY WIFE.

The Composer Married Her Merely to Oblige Her Father.

The Composer Married Her Merely to Oblige Her Father. Haydn married not the girl he was in love with, but her sister. "Haydn, you should take my oldest daughter," said Father Keller, the barber, and, as Keller had done a good deal for Haydn, the com-poser felt that he mpst sacrifice his af-fection on the altar of duty and oblige the old man. At the time of the mar-riage, in 1760, Haydn was 29, while his Anna Maria was 32. There does not appear to have been much love on either side to start with, but Haydn declared that he had really begun to "like" his wife and would have come to entertain a stronger feeling for her if ahe had be-haved in a reasonable way. Unfortu-nately, Anna Maria had neither rhyme nor reason in her composition. The en-tertaining Marville says that the ma-jority of ladies married to men of genius are so van of the abilities of their hus-bands that they are frequently insuffer-able. bands that they are frequently insuffer-able. But Frau Haydn was not a lady of that kind. The world had emphatically proclaimed her husband a genius, but to Maria it was quite immaterial whether he were a cobbler or an artist. Nay, she even committed the incredible crime of using the composer's manuscript scores for curling paper, as underlays for pas-try and similar things! She was gay enough with it all too. with selections of choice music, Mrs. T. Kerr presiding at the organ in her usual able manner. The Rev. Mr.
