

CHAPTER XXI.
DISASTER ON DISASTER.

The plan of operations for the rising was at least complete so far as anything could be said to be complete where everything was in a state of chaotic unpreparedness. The Fenians were simultaneously to enter the field in different parts of the country, and then an effort was to be made to join their forces.

David MacIlwaine, Bryan Flaherty, and the other leaders waited up all night before the eventful day, and by daylight had started to the place of meeting. They found five hundred men ready to accompany them after a short delay. David would have given much that morning that his eyes would for a while lose their power of seeing, for he could not look upon the small force that surrounded him without despairing thoughts. But fifty were really well armed; of the rest a large number carried pikes, but there were plenty who had no other arm than a reaping hook. Still the die was cast, and when the order to advance was given and a wild cheer was raised, David's heart bounded, and he walked with a brief step.

The first point of attack was a police barracks about five miles outside the town. When the rebels approached they were surprised to find that the barracks windows were barricaded, that every preparation to stand a siege was complete.

"By heavens," said MacIlwaine, "our secret must have been betrayed."

Bryan Flaherty sighed, but made no reply.

The rest of the party were not slow to see that treason had been at work, and many an oath of vengeance was muttered against the traitor.

David MacIlwaine and Bryan Flaherty were sent forward to demand the surrender of the barracks. The sergeant gave a decided refusal, although he had but twelve men under him. Then the fight began and went on fiercely for about an hour. By the end of that time one of the policemen was killed and four wounded. The sergeant killed the time had come for surrender.

The rebels immediately entered the barracks, and when a green flag with a harp, and without a crown, was sent flying in the breeze, the enthusiasm of everybody was excited almost to the pitch of madness. Bryan Flaherty also remained unmoved. It was decided that a detachment of forty men should be left to garrison the police barracks, and that the rest should go on to take other important positions. David MacIlwaine was left in command of the barracks; Bryan Flaherty led the large party of rebels.

After they had proceeded for about five miles they came in sight of a second police barracks, and this at once they prepared to attack. They had scarcely fired half a dozen shots when a whole squadron of cavalry was seen to approach in the distance. Here was evidence that could no longer be doubted of the existence of a traitor, for the cavalry had been stationed fifty miles away, and must have got warning in the night to be present so early on the scene of action. These men, with their glittering armour, their fine horses, their regular machine-like motion—how could one look on these, and then at a band of ill-clad, but partially armed, and wholly undisciplined peasantry, without giving way to despair?

However, Bryan Flaherty, though he knew too well what the result of the contest must be, was determined that there should be some show, at least, of fight. He gave an order to retreat to a tolerably steep hill some distance behind, and had reached the top of this by the time the cavalry had approached.

EPPE'S CURE. — (GRATEFUL AND JOYFUL).

By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected cocoa, Mr. Eppe has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame. — Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with Boiling Water or Milk. — Sold only in Packets labelled — "James Eppe & Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, 48 Threadneedle Street, and 170, Piccadilly, W., London, E.C.4."

DR. GEORGE SEYMOUR SAYS: — "I have used Dr. Wheeler's Compound Elixir of Phosphates and Calissaya quite extensively in my practice in a large number of cases for which it is recommended, and I am happy to state that I find it a remedy of great value and efficiency as a tonic in the treatment of chronic diseases."

Modern Women.

It is a sad commentary upon our boasted civilization that the women of our times have degenerated in health and physique until they are literally a race of invalids—pale, nervous, feeble and lack-lustre, with only here and there a few noble exceptions in the persons of the robust, buxom ladies characteristic of the sex in days gone by. By a very large experience, covering a period of years, and embracing the treatment of many thousands of cases of those ailments peculiar to Women, Dr. Pierce, of the World's Dispensary, Buffalo, N. Y., has perfected by combination of certain vegetable extracts, a natural specific, which he does not extol as a cure-all, but one which admirably fulfils a singular purpose, being a most positive and reliable remedy for those weaknesses and complaints that afflict the women of the present day. This natural specific compound is called Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The following are among those diseases in which this wonderful medicine has worked cures as if by magic and with a certainty never before attained by any medicines: — Weak back, nervous and general debility, failing and other displacements of internal organs, resulting from debility and lack of strength in natural supports, later at fever, congestion, inflammation and ulceration and very many other chronic diseases incident to women, not proper to mention here, in which, as well as in the cases that have been enumerated, the Favorite Prescription effects cures—the marvel of the world. It will do no harm in any state or condition of the system, and by adopting its use the invalid lady may avoid that severest of ordeals—the consulting of a family physician. Favorite Prescription is sold by dealers in medicines generally.

On Thursday last a son of Mr. James Hastings, of Blenheim, was killed while assisting at a raising in Turberry.
