Then we have the proposed extension of the New Brunswick railway to St Francis which would be a very useful piece of road, and of great advantage to the country, which it would traverse. The Gagettown people also are agitating for a railway. In short, gridinoned though the province is with railways, there is almost as much fever over them as ever, and over six hundred miles of new road are provinced.

Throughout me where campus pudiated the charge that he was in sympathy projectors of these roads all look for subsidies? This is an important matter, because even the small subsidy of $3,000 a mile means in the aggregate fully $2,000,000, which at four per cent. would entail an annual charge upon the revenue of $80,000. To state such a proposition seems to demonstrate the impossibility of carrying it out. As much ingenuity as falls to the lot of most men is required to meet the cost of the legal proceedings to secure Mr. Colter's seat in parliament, to which he was elected.

A Quebec despatch says two witnesses' examined at the police court in connection made a clean breast of the whole affair in such a way as to render the unseating of McGreevy, tory, a certainty. among the several services, already charge upon it. No one has yet suggested where the $80,000 can be got or charge upon it. No one has yet suggested where the $80,000 can be got or how it can be saved from other services and devoted to railways. Of course it can be done. If the municipalities would be willing to undertake the maintenance of the great roads and principal bye roads, leaving to the government of the maintenance of the great bridges and the by roads through sparsely settled districts, enough money might be saved to pay the interest on these numerous subsidies. But will the municipalitier agree to do this? We fancy that they would not, that no amount of argument would avail to induce them to do so. Yet the idea is worth examination, and it is not so impracticable as it may at first sight appear. Properly administered, the statute labor of the country ought to keep the roads through well settled districts in good condition, and it may be that by this means, and the consequent in good condition, and it may be that by this means, and the consequent saving to the provincial revenues, and the provincial revenues, the problem of how to subsidize additional railways may be met. It is possible to reduce the grant to education and throw the maintenance of that service the provincial railways may be met. It is possible to reduce the grant to education and throw the maintenance of that service the provincial railways and should be affaid to guarantee every bottle used. Such a step would be extremely upopular and no government would stand which would propose it. The claim is made that large savings can be made in connection with the legislature and the public departments. On this point there is a great misconception; but when the legislative council is abolished something will be saved. Any considerable decrease in departmental expenditure need not be looked for the popular time.

thing will be saved. Any considerance decrease in departmental expenditure need not be looked for. The increase of population and the expension of the settled districts continually augment the departmental work; but even if one-third of this expense could be asved, the amount would be very small corapared with what the railway subsidies would call for.
