News From the Bellaventure.

Messrs. A. J. Harvey & Co. at 5 p.m. yesterday had a repetition of the wireless message received from the Bellaventure a couple of days ago and which could not be properly deciphered.
The ship reported the ice to be very heavy, that there was no prospect of getting any more young seals, but that if the ship remained out a little longer she might get more old seals. The ship when the message was despatched was 90 miles N.W. of Belle Isle in the Straits.

Schooners Clear.

Minister of Marine & Fisheries.
Piccott had a telegram yesterday at 12.30 p.m. from Bonne Bay, saying that three men had walked ashore on the ice from a sealing schooner belonging to Channel and reported four other schooners with no seals. They recently saw a three-masted steamer which is supposed to be more or less disabled. The trouble seemed to be with the engines. The ship could force ahead easily but not go astern, so that it seemed her reversing gear was out of order. What steamer it is, is not definitely known but it is believed to be the Labrador.

MADRID, To-Day.
A debate on the Ferrer case in the chamber of Deputies was responsible for a turbulent session. The socialist leader, Ibañeta, raised a storm by declaring that although they could not resuscitate Ferrer, they could repair the injustice of his trial. If he did not succeed he would try to overthrow the administration which refused murdered reparation to a murdered man. He shouted, "Do not be surprised, deputies, if justice is denied, to hear the clash of arms." Premier Canalejas declared the Gov-and the force of the laws provided any Montrealer Who Was On S.S. Bruce Tells Graphic Story of the Wreck.

With men and women alternately praying and screaming in the darker hours of the early dawn, huge seas striking us and threatening to either pound the ship to pieces or else wash her off the reef upon which she had struck into deep water, I never want to go through such a nerve-racking experience as that which I did on Friday morning last, when the "good ship" Bruce, of Newfoundland, for Sydney, N.S., landed us on a Cape Breton point, declared Mr. A. J. Grubert, Manager of the Union Brewery, who was a passenger on the ill-fated vessel, in an interview with The Herald last night.

"I was lying in my bunk, wide awake," said Mr. Grubert, "and was listening to the vessel crunching her way through the ice which we had encountered about one-third the distance across the Cabot Strait from Newfoundland. All at once there was a tremendous crash; a grating, jarring of the Bruce by a huge wave, while the other two, Pike and Shea, were drowned.

"There was also a party of little Acadian girls on the boat and they were in hysterics all the time. One of them tried several times to throw herself into the water. It was about 8 o'clock in the morning when I left in the fifth and last boat to leave the damaged vessel's side. I asked the chief officer, who was a personal friend of mine, how long he thought the vessel would last and he said she might remain afloat on the reef for another hour, if the waves did not lift her bodily and drop her into deep water.

Landed on Shore.

"We landed on the Main-a-Dieu shoal—a bleak, bare spot inhabited only by a few 'livers,' natives who are engaged in the lobster industry. We did not see a sign of life and immediately took over the hats, which were there, for the shelter of the women, most of whom were not even clad.
We built fires and tried to make the best of things, not knowing then where we were exactly, until one of the 'livers' from the nearest settlement, came down to the beach with a catamaran drawn by a bull. He told us in very old-fashioned French that we were on the Main-a-Dieu shoal, and tearing sound, I leapt out of my berth, convinced that we had struck an iceberg, and rushed upon deck. The boat was rocking and swaying, though we did not of course know where we were then.

Rush For The Deck.

Almost immediately the passengers on the boat began to rush to the deck, some of them in semi-hysterics, others bearing in their arms what they could carry of their personal belongings.
"I saw the Marconi operator running to his instrument, but a minute before he reached the wireless cabin I noticed a long flash emanate from the wireless mast and the same moment the ship was plunged into total darkness. The water had evidently flooded the electrical batteries and rendered them useless.

Played Band and Prayed.

"Then the panic started. Scores were down on their knees praying, each in their own fashion. A father, mother and their little boy knelt on the deck and a small band of the Salvation Army which was on board, played hymns with just the same spirit in the face of death as though they were on dry land.

Captain Drake, our skipper, was on the bridge. Seeing that the Bruce was going to pieces he ordered the boats out. There was a party of twenty or more young Newfoundland fishermen sailors on board on their way to join a fishing ship at Vancouver. They got in with the regular crew and did heroic work.

First Boat Sank.

The first boat swung off the davits into the water was staved in and sank.
The second boat, while being loosened up by five of the Newfoundlanders, caught all five of them and hurried them into theinky water. Two we managed to gaff out with boat hooks, a third was washed back on the deck that our vessel had struck Cape Bre-ton Point.

"It was noon when the Louisburg came to our assistance and it is needless to say that we were extremely thankful for we were all cold and starving. Before we were rescued a few of us managed to save some of our baggage, for the Bruce was but 100 yards or so from the point on which we had landed from the boats.

Captain Holmes, of the Louisburg, took care of us in the kindest manner and no amount of praise for him could be too much.—Montreal Daily Herald.

To whom it may concern: This is to certify that I have used MINARD'S LINIMENT myself as well as prescribed it in my practice where a liniment was required and have never failed to get the desired effect.

Tried to Enter Church.

Last night after devotions in one of our city churches a man, who it was at first thought was demented, ran towards the building shouting and gesticulating and tried to enter the edifice. Some men present caught him and he was forcibly ejected, when it was seen that he was under the influence of liquor. He showed fight but was soon sent about his business.
On seeing the police at Rawlins' Cross as he passed that way, he became very quiet and quickly proceeded home.

Taft and Bryan talked peace to-day.
Other things may have come up in the hour's discussion, when the President and the Nebraskan met at the White House, but the question of international peace predominated. Bryan was particularly interested in the proposition submitted by him to Taft more than a year ago, which he thought might do much to prevent war, a commission to which disputes between nations might be submitted, the commissioners' findings not to be binding upon the countries involved, but to be published to the world, thus exerting a moral influence.
