"Up You Dead."

THE CRY SAVES THE TRENCH.

Paris, France, May 20.—A French lieutenant, now lying wounded in a Paris hospital, has given this account of the thrilling action in which he received his injury:
"We were fortifying a trench which we had taken. Behind a barrier of sacks which blocked one end of it, two sentinels kept careful watch. We could work in all security.
"Suddenly an avalanche of bombs tumbled down on our heads. Before we could recover, ten of our men were stretched on the ground, dead or wounded, pellmell.
"I opened my mouth to urge them on again, when a stone from the parapet, torn out by a projectile, hit me on the head. I fell unconscious. My stupor lasted a second only. A splinter of shell tore my left hand and the pain brought me to.
"As I opened my eyes, weakened, my mind benumbed, I saw the 'boches' jump over the barrier of sacks and invade the trench. There were about twenty. They had no guns but they carried in front of them a sort of wicker basket filled with bombs.
"I looked to the left. Our men had gone, the trench was empty. The 'boches' advanced; a few more steps and they were on me.
"A Hero of Heroes.
"Just then one of my men, lying on the ground, a wound on his forehead, a wound on his chin, blood streaming from his face, dragged himself to a sitting position, seized a sack of grenades near him and cried out, 'Up, you dead!'
"He pulled himself to his knees, dived into the sack and flung the grenades at the group of assailants.
"In answer to his cry, three more wounded men dragged themselves up. Two of them, who had broken legs, took guns and opening the magazines started a rapid fire, each shot of which hit home. The third, whose left arm was inert, seized a bayonet with his right.
"When I picked myself up, having quite recovered my senses, about half the hostile group had been felled, the rest having retreated in disorder.
"All that remained was a huge, perspiring sub-officer, congested with rage, who, leaning against the barrier protected by the iron shield, continued most courageously, I must say, to fire his revolver in our direction.
"The Trench is Saved.
"The man who was first to organize the defense, who had cried, 'Up, you dead!' received a bullet straight in the jaw. He collapsed.
"Suddenly the soldier with the bayonet, who for some minutes had been crawling from corpse to corpse, stopped about four feet from the barrier, drew himself up, dodged two bullets fired at him, and plunged his bayonet into the German's throat.
"The position was saved. The wounded soldier's sublime appeal had resuscitated the 'dead.'"

LINERS HAVE 34,000 TONS WAR MATERIAL.

New York, May 19.—The Cunarder Orduña and the White Star steamships Arabic and Georgia, which left this port in the last two days for Liverpool, carried 34,000 tons of war munitions and provisions for the Allies.
Among the 10,000 tons carried on the Orduña were 32,000 cases of cartridges, 3,750 cases shrapnel, 1,169 cases of empty shells, 548 cases of brass rods, 25 cases of tungsten metal, three cases of copper, 120 barrels of sheet brass, 3,687 bundles of steel angles, five auto cassis, one aeroplane tractor, 220 barrels of crude metal, 260 barrels of nickel, 3,725 ingots of nickel, 353 copper cathodes, 4,100 copper ingots, 400 tons of steel billets, 488 bundles of steel plate, 133 cases of infantry equipment, 476 cases of uniforms, two auto truck cassis, five cases of rifles, four cases of motor cycle tires, 594 cases of leather military articles, 44 cases of metal working machinery and eight cases of brass wire.
The 12,000 tons of cargo on the Arabic included 795 barrels of grease, 3,407 pigs of lead, 3,370 bars of copper, 5,215 ingots of copper, 400 cases of cartridges, 730 cases of barbed wire, 1,516 pieces of forgings for guns, 14,041 barrels of steel and 41 automobiles.
The cargo of the Georgia included 4,247 cases of loaded shells, 1,000 cases of cartridges, one aeroplane, 670 reels of barbed wire, 1,840 steel billets, 736 bars of iron, 722 bars of steel billets, 759 bundles of steel, 25 cases of fuses, 12 cases of forgings for guns, 20 auto trucks, 548 cases of auto parts, 168 auto cassis, and 1,882 barrels of lubricating oil.
Loaded shells are not likely to explode unless the fuses have been inserted. The fuses are shipped in separate cases on the ships.

INTERNED FRENCH SAILORS ARE RELEASED BY ITALY.

Rome, May 29.—A Messina despatch to the Messagero says that after Italy's declaration of hostilities the minister of war ordered the release of the survivors of the crew of the French cruiser Leon Gambetta, who had been interned at Messina. They will be sent back to France.
The Leon Gambetta was torpedoed by the Austrian submarine U-5 in the straits of Otranto on April 28 with the loss of 552 of her crew.
