AT THE CRESCENT.

The Edison picturization of "The Life of Abraham Lincoln" is a complete story of the principal events in this great man's career and is being shown at the Crescent Picture Palace to-day. Ruth Stonehouse, the favorite Essanay star, features in a southern drama: "A Night in Kentucky." A fine single reel Biograph feature is "The Master of the Sword," and Constantine Talmadge and Billy Quirk appear in a Vitagraph comedy: "The Vanishing Vault." Mr. Dave Parks, Baritone soloist, sings "I'm a Lonesome Melody," a new ballad by Leo W. Meyer. On to-morrow a Bird and Home Comedy: "The Pollywogs Picnic."

EXPLOITS OF ELAINE REPEATED TO-DAY.

The "Exploits of Elaine" was the chief attraction at the Nickel Theatre yesterday. The Exploits, the ninth episode of which was shown, is the most sensational of all the serials with the most thrilling scenes and best photography. "The Death Ray" which was the title of yesterday's chapter had the strictest attention of all from start to finish. The Essanay artists were seen in a beautiful three part drama: "The Awakening Hour." This was one of the daintiest stories ever seen at the movies; the well known actress Nell Craig played a great character. "His Superficial Wife" is an impressive social drama, while the comedy was one of the Keystone Co.'s best. The programme will be repeated to-day and all should see it.

IN "THE DIVORCE QUESTION."

This company, which has already established itself strongly in this city, continues to increase its popularity amongst our theatre-going public and they made another big hit at the Casino Theatre last night in the presentation of "The Divorce Question." The play summed up shows the stand of the Roman Catholic Church and its stout repudiation of divorce law; also an instance is cited, proving beyond all question of doubt the awful results of one of the many cases of divorce. The crowded, attentive and appreciative audience present enjoyed immensely the admixture of pleasure, impressiveness and emotionalism.

Prior to the acts the Company introduced some specialties which were thoroughly entertaining, as shown by the frequent and prolonged applause given.

The divorce story tells about a man and woman, who are married, having two children, a boy and a girl, get divorced and both re-marry and have another family. The former children were put with relatives who neglected them, so they ran away. The girl mixes up with adherents of the White Slave Traffic and the boy becomes a dope fiend. It happens that the boy makes an effort to rescue his sister, but is remonstrated with and he shoots one of the gang of his sister's betrayers and takes refuge in the church. There the boy tells the whole story to the priest who protects him, friends of the priest who came to consult him on certain matters are presented with their children. The priest and the parents turn to the children of their second marriages, though they are both willing to contribute largely to the support of their former children. The persistent refusal of either parent to the girl's plea to be taken home, results in her death. The boy becomes despondent, strikes the father a stunning blow, is prevented from striking his mother by the priest and then leaves the place, but is again found by the priest, who brings him back. The parents heart broken by the remorse, both agree to take the boy home, but it is too late he has fallen into the hands of the law for shooting one of those who was the means of ruining the life of his sister. Therefore, the result of the divorce is that one of the children died from the excesses of grief and exposure, the other lies in the shadow of the gallows.

The play was well staged and has to be seen to be properly appreciated. Hardin Clark, as Father Jerome, the parish priest, excelled. Albert Peterson, as "Dope Doe," was very effective. Lillian Dean and Thomas Brower, as Mrs. Rodger Manners and Herbert Lockwood, the divorced parents, won much distinction. Maisie Cecil, as one of their children, made a great impression. Frank Urban, made a typical Pat Kelly, the caretaker; Charles E. Mills was very effective as Eugene Lawrence, the lawyer, who is a firm believer in divorce. Billy Webb (Harold Kitchbrush) and Auralia Clarke (Catherine Spauling) who were prevented from getting married in a hurry by the priest, arrived in a no small degree to the success of the play. "The Divorce Question" will be repeated to-night.
