

The British American Claims Commission.

It has been announced that at a late hour on Wednesday night the British American Claims Commission, organized under the 12th article of the Washington Treaty, for the adjudication of the British and American claims, other than the Alabama claims, concluded its business. The Commission first met at Washington on the 26th September, 1871, and during their sessions since that period have had under consideration four hundred and seventy-eight claims of British subjects against the United States, and nineteen claims of citizens of the United States against Great Britain. The result, broadly stated, is that all the latter class of claims—that is, those made by the citizens of the United States against Great Britain—have been disallowed, while of the former sufficient have been found valid to foot up a bill of awards against the United States to the extent of $2,500,000. The nineteen United States claims referred to were for losses said to have been inflicted by the St. Albans raid, and by the detention of some ships at Calcutta, which had been loading with saltpetre. The British cases brought under the consideration of the Commission were embraced under the following heads: For the loss of cotton and personal property taken and destroyed; false imprisonment; and the seizure and detention of ships, which latter class amounted to more than one-fourth of the claims represented. Among the most important of claims passed upon were those of British ships alleged to have been illegally captured by the Northern naval forces and condemned in the prize courts. Millions of dollars were demanded as the value of ships thus captured while attempting to violate the blockade. A large proportion of these were rejected, the Commissioners at an early day having decided that they had jurisdiction only in those cases which had been taken on appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States. The amount awarded to the claimants under this head totals $700,000, and it has been remarked that in every case the Commissioners have overruled the Supreme Court, which had decided the cases in favor of the United States Government. Thus this chapter in the history of the notorious Washington Treaty has been closed with a measure of satisfaction on the part of the British—which is more than can be said for any previous portion of the work of the High Courts. The value of the fisheries is now the only question incident to the Treaty which remains unsettled.

SCROFULA, ENLARGEMENT OF THE GLANDS OF THE NECK, Eruptions of the Skin, Spinal Disease, Torpid Liver with constipation and headache, Irritation of the Kidneys and Bladder, Nervous Prostration and General Debility, depend upon deranged nutrition and impoverished blood arising from indigestion. Dr. Wills' Compound Elixir of Phosphorus and Calceola immediately reaches the primary cause of these diseases, Dyspepsia, and enables the stomach to completely digest and assimilate a sufficient quantity of nutriment to build up the tissues.
