Dr. Stafford in and out of the

One of the best known of the leaders in e Methodist Church of Canada to-day is Rev. Dr. Stafford, at present pastor of the Sherbourne Street Church in Toronto. He s, indeed, a marked personality in Canadian lity of thought and expression. One t agree with everything he says, but tainly has the faculty of awakening st and compelling attention. Some pulpit utterances sound like paraseemingly false in appearance, but fact. His sermons are in a very high stimulating to thought and inquiry. bably few men receive more letters on subject of his sermons than he. If one is inclined to dissent from something he has said, it will be found worth while thinking it over, and probably on second thought a sound reason will be found for the challenged utterance. His fresh, unhackneyed and original way of puting things sometimes startles persons accus-tomed only the ordinary staid and somehat conventional pulpit manner. He is b of those preachers who wear well, he ds his congregations after years of illiarity as well as before the charm of

Dr. Stafford has something of the poet, too, in his composition. We do not mean in mechanical expression, for we are not aware that he has ever written verse, except a small volume published some years ago. We mean an elevation of thought, an epigrammatic force of expression and the frequent use of imagery and figures of speech of a highly picturesque character. Some of his illustrations are quite Dickenslike in their blending of humor and pathos. Others partake more of the quality of an apologue or allegory. Were it not for these gleams of poetry and an occasional vein of subacid sarcasm, which we believe is unconscious and unintentional, he would be considered a coldly intellectual preacher. Dr. Stafford derives no particular advantage from his pulpit manner. In appearance he is tall and commanding, but he is exceedingly spare, indeed has much of the "lean and hungry look" ascribed by Shakespeare to Casius. His voice is not very musical and has some strange modulations, and his gestures are few, but when they occur are natural and emphatic.

The distinguished preacher writes as he speaks with freshness and vigor, but is more apt to drop into a philesophical veen with his pen than in the pulpit. One of his ablest papers is one on the indebtedness of religion to free thought, read at a meeting of the American Philosophical Association and published in the transactions of the society. Another thoughtful production is a volume of judicious counsels on divine guidance. As president of the Toronto Conference and member of successive general conferences, Dr. Stafford has taken an active part in the administration and legislation of the Methodist Church. Probably he never rendered more signal service than in the gr

The Reciprocity Question.

Washington, Sept. 13.—There is still a remote chance that the Sherman reciprocity amendment with Canada, or some provision like it, may be incorporated in the tariff bill. Mr. Sherman has had a conference with the friends of his coposition in the Senate and the House, and the assurance is given that there are Republicans enough in the Senate in favor of the Sherman reciprocity amendment with Canada to incorporate it in a bill, if it can come to a direct vote. The question, to a very great degree, is one of Parliamentary precedence. The Democrats quite generally have indicated their readiness to support such a measure, though, of course, party tactics may spoil the prospect at any moment.

THE METHODISTS.

Splendid Success of the Mani-

ed Change in Discipline Claus

Montreal, Sept. 13.—The Methodist General Conference got through a good deal of work yesterday, receiving a vast number of notices of motion and another batch of memorials. Rev. Dr. Stafford proposed an important change in the dancing and cardplaying clause in the discipline. Rev. Principal Austin presented the annual report of Alma College, St. Thomas, which was referred to the Educational Committee. Rev. James Woodsworth, superintendent was referred to the Educational Committee. Rev. James Woodsworth, superintendent of missions in the Northwest, read his full and encouraging report of four years' work in the region under his charge. It showed that the number of circuits and missions stations had increased from 74 in 1886 to 46 in 1890, an advance of 318 per cent. On the average the missions in this region had only had a dependence on the Missionary Society of some four years and three months. The average salary paid on those independent circuits to married men was $913, and to single men $444. In 1886 there were 310 preaching stations, now these had increased to 459. To accommodate these they had only 95 churches, an increase, however, of 35 over 1886. The value of church property had gone up from $161,240 to $264,521. The money raised for all purposes has grown from $50,961 in 1886 to $111,485, or an average of $125 per white member. The Indian roll had lengthened from $42 to 1,109, and the white roll from 4,191 to $8,786. Not more than 25 per cent. of this increase was due to recent immigration. The Sunday school department had grown from $4 schools, 555 teachers and 4,073 scholars in 1890. While the church has sent $33,455 missionary money into the Territories they have already paid back into this fund in the way of subscriptions $22,112.
