CORRESPONDENCE

Future Punishment.
To the Editor of The Advertiser:
Will you permit me to make a few remarks upon the sermon on "Future Punishment," by the Rev. Mr. Manning, which you published on Saturday last?

I have a great respect and regard for Mr. Manning, nevertheless I cannot find in this sermon anything like the hell that was believed and preached by John Wesley, nor the hell that has been believed in and preached generally in the Christian church until of late years.

Though the Rev. John Wesley repudiated certain teachings of Calvin, yet he believed in the awful hell of Scripture, as the place of eternal punishment.

Our thoughts of justice and God's thoughts of justice are evidently not the same.

The natural human mind is staggered as it contemplates what God has done in the past in destroying the human race all but eight persons, in ordering the destruction of the Canaanites, man, woman and child, etc.

More astonished still are we to read of men being "tormented with fire and brimstone" in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb; and the smoke of their torment ascendeth up forever and ever; and they have no rest day and night. Yet in face of these awful proceedings we find the saints singing, "Just and true are Thy ways, thou King of saints."

From the "wrath" side, God is called "terrible" in the Scriptures. In the Book of Revelations awful judgments are predicted and pictured as coming upon the inhabitants of the earth before the end, yet the clarity of the wicked to more awful still, as we might reason that it would be.

The Apostle Paul charges us "before God and the Lord Jesus Christ," to "preach the Word." Paul and Socrates did not know, but Christ who said, "I am the truth" knew, and the "Spirit of Truth" who inspired the New Testament writers knew.

Christ represented a well-to-do man of the world in hell descending water to cool his tongue, and saying "I am tormented in this flame." He, who is the Truth, spoke the truth, and with this statement the other New Testament characters concur.

When there are such horrors and torments in this world as we read of in history—in this world of mingled good and evil—it seems to me absurd to look forward to a hell of wrath more pleasant than conditions in this world.

If there is not greater happiness in heaven and greater misery in hell than the best and the worst in this world can afford, then I should want the Word of God to tell me so before I could believe.

Any light view of hell is an encouragement to suicide to escape some of the awful miseries of this life. If anyone does not think so, let him read something of the tortures to which men have been subjected, and the agonies of pain even in sickness which some people have endured.

Eminent Christians have been given visions of hell. Those visions have corresponded with the Scripture statements regarding the fearful torments of hell.

Some dying infidels have had such awful realizations of the fires of hell and of waiting demons that people have fled from their death chambers rather than witness their terror.

Evan Roberts had a vision of hell before the Welsh revival, which led him to cry out to God to give him another opportunity to save men.

Dr. Torrey has come to the Scriptures to get rid of the hell of fire, but has repeatedly been driven back to strive more ardently than ever to save men from what he found to be clearly there.

Oh, let me say, back to the Word, read the Word, meditate upon the Word, "preach the Word," believe the Word on this subject as on any other. Paul's belief of hell led him to "warn day and night with tears." Does the modern lighter view of hell lead to this?
