Potash with nitrogen is always an important fertilizer with special crops where the object is to produce sugar, starch—as with sugar beets and potatoes. It is also apparently essential for the formation of protein, and, thus, indirectly aids in the function of all organic matter.

The season, in contrast to last year's splendid harvesting year, has been and is, the very opposite, It has been backward in every detail. Although the frost has assisted the sugar percentage, it has made the oversoaked fields and roads almost impassable. The backwardness of October made it a trying time to the farmers who in their endeavor to work at the beets lost their apple crop, through sudden frosts. Labor is becoming scarcer all the time, as the wet clay mud clings to the roots and makes it very hard work, so much so, that Belgians who are experienced in the cultivation and harvesting of the beets, find that it is too nard work for them and are thus quitting their contracts. The farmers are taking advantage of every bright day and the past week has helped them considerably but still there seems to be an inevitable loss to the growers unless the weatherman sees the situation and gives the "tillers of the soil" enough fine weather to finish out the harvest.

The following reports come from Lendton and contacts of the soil" enough fine weather to finish out the harvest.

enough fine weather to finish out the harvest.

The following reports come from Lambton sugar beet area:

Aivinston—The farmers who have beet crops still in the ground are having a hard time harvesting them, owing to the heavy frosts each night.

Watford—Lambton's sugar beet crop this season is very late owing to weather conditions.

Inwood—Sugar beets are still being shipped in great abundance from the village. Owing to the severe weather many farmers have been unable to dig their roots and bushels of potatoes and carrots etc, are still in potatoes and carrots etc, are still in the ground. It is with difficulty that the sugar beets can be dug.
